WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Virginia is at last out of the toils of Congress. Her admission, so far as legislative action is concerned, is complete. The bill will be promptly signed by the President, and before the week is out we may look for her representatives upon the floor of Congress. There was a rough, sharp, ugly debate in the House, with a great deal of cross firing between Republicans, but the Senate amendments to the bill were concurred in by the unanimous vote of the Republicans, the Democratic members of the House, like those of the Senate, going on record against the bill because they believe the premises attached to it unconstitutional. Mr. FARNSWORTH managed the matter to-day with great success. The Reconstruction Committee met this morning, and, though the bill was not before them, they informally agreed to the Senate amendments. When Mr. FARNSWORTH got the floor he yielded to Mr. BINGHAM, who approved the oath, because it simply enforced the third section of the Fourteenth Amendment. The premises he objected to, but they did not impose any restrictions, and merely required Virginia to live up to her Constitution. BUTLER has craved an opportunity for a week to wreak his revenge on BINGHAM and FARNSWORTH for daring to pass the bill in the first place in his absence. He did so in his ugliest manner. He taunted BINGHAM with deserting his party, and indirectly slurred FARNSWORTH in the same way. When the latter came to reply, he took BUTLER up without gloves. He pounced on his political record, and brought the House and galleries down by depicting his crooked political course, and contrasting his Republicanism to the sudden conversion of Paul and to the excessive zeal of Peter. BUTLER had not expected this rotort, but had to take it, as there was no opportunity for reply. The bill then passed by a party vote.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

A great deal of interest was manifested in the House to-day when Mr. DAWES reported the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill. The details of the bill will be found elsewhere. Mr. DAWES stated that the bill appropriated $2,879,612 83 less than was estimated, and its total amount is about the same as last year. It would have been considerably less but for the large increase in the public printing, owing to the fact that Congress last session required all printing to be done at the Government office, which closed up all the smaller offices connected with the Departments. The expenses of the Legislative Department have been reduced over $1,000,000. Mr. DAWES stated that it was necessary to put several legislative provisions into the bill in order to enforce the reductions of expenditure. The great difficulty which the Committee found was the fact that, in many bureaus, large unexpended balances remain, which are subject to current use. They proposed hereafter to convert into the Treasury all such balances remaining unexpended two years after their appropriation. Among the features of the bill is the abolition of the Bureau of Education, over which there will be a lively contest. The bill is the special order for Wednesday and thereafter until disposed of.

SENATOR SHERMAN'S CURRENCY BILL.

The Comptroller of the Currency has furnished the Senate Finance Committee with a statement showing, in part, how the forty-five millions of new currency provided for in SHERMAN's bill, to-day under consideration in the Senate, will have to be distributed:

Virginia and West Virginia	$1,302,857	Georgia	$1,078,268
Missouri	1,604,421	North Carolina	1,226,740
Kentucky	1,704,456	South Carolina	1,038,235
Tennessee	1,296,192	Alabama	2,084,238
Louisiana	1,296,192	Texas	1,296,192
Mississippi	1,296,192	Arkansas	1,296,192
		Florida	259,238

This makes an aggregate of $16,299,970, which is the proportion of national bank notes belonging to the aforesaid States under the provision of the existing laws requiring the distribution of $350,000,000 on the basis of the population. The remaining $19,710,030 authorized in this new bill must be distributed on the basis of the State resources. The Comptroller has not furnished any statement saying officially where this will go, but he says in conversation that the whole or the greater part of it must also be given to the Southern States, Wisconsin alone of the Northern and Western States getting a small amount.

THE GOLD PLOT INVESTIGATION.

The Banking Currency Committee met this morning and had a very short session, Mr. MARTIN, of SMITH, GOULD & MARTIN, being the only witness examined. He testified to buying gold on the orders of GOULD, his partner in the firm; but his testimony otherwise was not important. The Committee meet again to-night. Mr. A. R. CORBIN, who was in Kentucky when first summoned, has returned to New-York, and is expected here to-morrow morning to testify. It is proper to add that neither FISK nor GOULD left with the Committee, when here, any evidence, documentary or otherwise, save the most reckless assertion and unreliable hearsay, going to show that there was ever any recognition by the President or Mrs. GRANT of any of the transactions or utterances of CORBIN in his operations with FISK and GOULD. The testimony of Mr. CORBIN will doubtless make this clearer than ever, if any doubt exists anywhere.

REDUCTION OF THE ARMY.

The bill for the reduction of the army, has received some consideration from the House Military Committee. They have agreed on the clause providing for the appointment of a Board of five officers to examine officers below the rank of Brigadier General, with a view to mustering some of them out of the service.

PENSION FOR MRS. LINCOLN.

The subject of a pension for Mrs. LINCOLN has again come before Congress. Last year the sum proposed to be allowed her was $5,000, the bill for which was introduced by Mr. SUMNER. The other Massachusetts Senator introduced another bill to-day to accomplish the same object, but the sum specified was only $3,000 per annum.

THE TARIFF.

The Ways and Means Committee are now revising the Tariff bill for the last time, preparatory to reporting it to the House. When they came to grind to-day, they put up the rate from three cents, at which they had first fixed it, to three and a quarter; so that, if it has to come down in the House it won't come too far. The high tariff men on the Committee seem demented. They are utterly bereft of all reason apparently, and see nothing but the highest rates on every leading article on the list. Their bill will be torn to tatters in the House, so that it is difficult to see what they expect to accomplish by their extreme course in committee.

THE PORT WARDENS OF NEW-YORK.

The House Committee on Commerce have not yet taken any definite action on the bill to change the Port Wardens of New-York and make them Federal instead of State officers. The Committee will meet to-morrow and consider the subject.

THE COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS.

The House to-day, by a vote of 126 to 26, agreed to the proposition offered some weeks since by General FARRA, and this morning by Mr. BURR, of Illinois, that the House Committee on Elections is a judicial body, and that its proceedings should be conducted free from partisan influences and in accordance with the rules of law. A motion to lay the resolution on the table only got thirty votes. A great many Radical Republicans dodged, but the great majority of the just and liberal men of the House voted for it.

PRINCE ARTHUR IN THE SENATE.

The Senate side of the Capitol was almost entirely deserted to-day, the proceedings being almost wholly of a financial character, were to the majority of the people dull and uninteresting. There was a momentary flurry in the gallery when Prince ARTHUR and suite, accompanied by Minister THORNTON, appeared in the portion of the Chamber reserved for the diplomats, and not a few lorgnettes were turned on him. He remained only about fifteen minutes. Senator CAMERON, as soon as the Prince appeared in the gallery, left his seat on the floor and went up and paid his respects.

AMERICAN REGISTERS FOR AMERICAN VESSELS.

The Senate Committee on Commerce has a large number of applications before it from various shipowners, asking that they may be allowed American registers for their vessels. Many of them were changed during the war, and there is a very strong desire on their part to get back again.

ADVICES FROM PARAGUAY.

Minister KIRK writes from Buenos Ayres by the last arrival that orders from Asuncion had been given by both the Brazilian and Argentine commanders, withdrawing their troops from Paraguay, and declaring the war at an end. Mr. KIRK alludes to the rumors of the reappearance of LOPEZ at the head of an Indian army, but remarks that the reports were evidently not credited by the Allies.

AMUSEMENTS.

MAPLESON'S Opera Troupe opened the season here to-night with "Il Trovatore," which was sung with great spirit and received with unbounded applause, Maurice, Lucrezia and Count De Lucia being repeatedly called before the curtain to receive the plaudits of the audience.

PERSONAL.

Among the arrivals in the city are General MERRITT, Naval Officer, and Colonel FRANK B. HOWE, Special Treasury Agent, New-York.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Monday, Jan. 24.

Mr. HENLIN presented the credentials of his colleague, LOT M. MORRILL, elected by the Legislature of Maine for the unexpired term of the late Mr. FESSENDEN, the vacancy having been previously filled by an appointment of the Governor. The credentials were read and the usual oath of office administered to Mr. MORRILL by the chair.

A PERSONAL EXPLANATION DESIRED.

Mr. STEWART said he desired to make a personal explanation, in order to correct a statement by Mr. SUMNER in the discussion between that Senator and Mr. TRUMBULL on Friday last. Mr. SUMNER said if the request was granted he would ask to reply at once, at length, and would go into the whole history of the question, upon which remarks would be made requiring at least an hour of time. The order of business being called for, the request of Mr. STEWART was not granted.

MEMORIALS AND PETITIONS.

Mr. FENTON presented a memorial of the citizens of Western New-York, in relation to certain manufacturing interests, embracing the productions of saw mills, &c., in Western New-York and along the Northern border, praying Congress to remove the present duty of twenty per cent. upon timber brought in from Canada, which enters into these productions; and that the tax now resting on this class, coming from there, shall be removed.

Numerous petitions were presented for the abolition of the franking privilege.

Mr. SCOTT presented a petition for pensions to the soldiers of the war of 1812, and urged definite action for their relief.

Mr. CONKLING presented the petition of the Board of Trade of Buffalo against the contingence or renewal of the income tax; also several petitions for the abolition of the franking privilege; also petitions from the manufacturers of Philadelphia for the removal of the import duty on nitrate of potash and nitrate of soda; also one from a number of ladies for the recognition in the National Constitution of the authority of Almighty God.

CLAIMS OF SHIP CONTRACTORS.

Mr. DRAKE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported, with amendments, and asked for the immediate consideration of a bill for the relief of certain contractors for the construction of vessels of war and steam machinery.

The bill refers claims to the Court of Claims, except the claims of certain contractors named therein.

The bill was read. In answer to Mr. THURMAN, Mr. DRAKE explained that the object of the bill was to afford an opportunity for proof of claims upon the basis of the act of March 3, 1867, providing for their investigation.

The bill was finally laid over for the present.

THE CONDITION OF GEORGIA.

Mr. NORTON offered a resolution—

Directing the Judiciary Committee to report to the Senate, as soon as practicable by what authority, if any, General TERRY has organized and convened a Military Commission to inquire into the eligibility of Senators and Representatives elected to the Legislature of Georgia, and their right to hold seats in that body, and for the purpose of facilitating such inquiries the President of the United States and the Secretary of War be and are hereby requested to communicate to the Senate copies of all orders which they have issued, and the correspondence with General TERRY or the Governor of Georgia, and generally all information they may have with reference to the action of such Military Commission.

Mr. SUMNER objected to the present consideration of the resolution, and it was laid over.

PENSION FOR MRS. LINCOLN.

Mr. WILSON offered for reference the joint resolution of granting a pension to the widow of the late President LINCOLN. Referred to the Committee on Finance.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill to provide a national currency of coin and notes, and to equalize the distribution and circulation of notes; which was read.

Mr. SHERMAN, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, opened the debate on the bill. He said it presented, first, the partial equalization of circulation of the bank currency among the States; second, free banking and coin bonds. The present distribution of bank circulation was grossly and palpably unfair. Three States—Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, containing population less than two millions—have over $64,000,000 circulation; while the rapidly-growing Old Western States where credit is most needed, have scarcely $3 to an inhabitant, and all the late rebel States are practically without any banking circulation. This unfair distribution, he said, grew out of a palpable violation of the law by the then Comptroller of the Currency, and the Secretary of the Treasury. If the law of March 3, 1865, had been observed, each State would have had reserved for it not less than $5 for each inhabitant. The pretence to justify this disregard of the law was a provision in the Internal Revenue act of March 3, 1865, which contended up until July 1, 1866, the privilege to existing banks to become national banks. Under the system as it stands, national banking was, he said, a monopoly confined to a few States where the population was not increasing, excluding all the rapidly growing States of the West. A majority of Senators and Representatives from those States have not less than one-seventh of the whole circulation. This endangered the whole system, and would inevitably overthrow it unless corrected. Mr. SHERMAN referred to the advantages of the national banking system over that of the State banks, which, in consequence of the injustice of distribution, would be the best permanent banking system that could be adopted. The West demanded more circulation, and were deprived of it by the violation of the law. The East, enjoying its monopoly, demand a contraction, yet was not willing to yield the circulation to be distributed to the Southern and Western States, which was the proposition of the bill. The first objection was, that this was an expansion of the currency to which the Committee was opposed, and Mr. SHERMAN said in no event during suspension of specie payments would he favor a proposition to increase the banking circulation without drawing the circulation in some other form. To avoid expansion of the currency two measures had been proposed: first, the withdrawal of the greenbacks; and second, the plan adopted by the Senate Committee—the withdrawal of the three per cent. certificates now held by the banks as part of their reserves in place of legal tender notes. He then gave the history of these three per cent. certificates, which he said, were substituted for the compound interest notes, and were a temporary expedient to avoid an increase of the bonded debt. They were the least objectionable. Being payable on demand, they might be presented to the Treasury when most inconvenient. They draw interest, and are mainly held in the Eastern banks, where the circulation is in excess. Gold payments the United States saves three per cent. interest, and will get three per cent. taxes on the new banks to be organized. The Committee then proposed to withdraw these certificates as rapidly as new banks organized, and thus leave the currency without either expansion or contraction. The remaining provisions of the bill authorized, he said, free banking or coin notes.

Mr. DAVIS remarked that the chief value of the gold notes was dependent upon the facility with which they were redeemed. To make them equal in value to gold their certain and prompt redemption was necessary, unless premised by the holder to the bank. In case the bank failing to make them equal to coin, the Government must be ready and able to step in and redeem the notes.

Mr. SHERMAN replied by reference to the fourth section of the bill, requiring every national bank to keep on hand at least twenty-five per cent. of its circulation in gold or silver coin. Then, too, the law under the present system was, that if a note was presented to a bank and not paid, the noteholder might at once present it to the Government, which would redeem it within twenty days. The banks were bound to redeem their notes at a centre in each section, and the same general principle that applied to circulating notes applied also to gold notes.

Mr. HOWE delivered a lengthy argument in review of the various financial propositions which had been suggested. He said that if the country would be content to be honest without being particularly virtuous to be smart, the difficulty to be encountered would be lessened. He advocated the proposition to allow legal tenders to be funded in six per cent. bonds, redeemable at the pleasure of the Government, conferring the privilege of funding to those who will use the bonds as a basis for a new bank circulation, and giving the preference to those portions of the country which may from time to time be deficient in circulation. He complained that the Government compelled the public creditor to carry its own overdue obligations and made him no compensation for so doing, and that the pending bill did not attempt to right the wrong. He complained also that the amount of circulation was limited by an inflexible law, and this wrong the pending bill would perpetuate. The franchise of banking was a monopoly, arbitrarily and unjustly distributed among the few to the exclusion of the many; but the pending bill created a new monopoly. It also proposed to silence all complaints that the South and West were denied equal rights under the law, by flinging to them a pittance of $45,000,000 to growl over among themselves. He would have a law which declared a gold gambler a criminal, and consigned him to the Penitentiary for life; but this bill proposed to license him, and set up his trade under the sanction of sacred law.

Mr. SUMNER believed the proposition to supply $45,000,000 additional would not meet the present requirements. The proposition to provide national currency coin notes instituted a system of free banking upon a specie basis which was impossible until we had specie payments. Besides, this would create a third currency, in addition to that of greenbacks and gold notes. He intimated that he would propose an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the bill.

The proposed amendment is a bill recently introduced and explained by him, to provide national currency coin notes, and equalize the distribution of circulating notes.

Mr. COLE gave notice that he would offer as an amendment, to insert in lieu of the former portion of the bill, the following:

That in addition to the amount of United States notes heretofore issued and now in circulation, the secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue, in exchange for United States interest-bearing bonds, at their market value, $45,000,000 of such notes for circulation.

The Senate then went into Executive Session, and after about an hour's session, at 4:35 adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. CALKINS presented a petition from 3,000 merchants, mechanics and artisans of New-York City, against allowing American registers to foreign-built ships, and in favor of a reduction of existing taxes on shipbuilding and commerce.

A large number of petitions for the abolition of the franking privilege were presented by Messrs. Knapp, Kelsey, of New-York; Jones, of Kentucky; Tanner, Ketcham, Strong, Garfield and others.

Mr. MUNGEN presented the petition of H. H. BIGELOW and 154 other citizens of Worcester, Mass., for the repudiation of the national war debt.

By Mr. PALMER—To establish a postal telegraph system, and to incorporate the United States Postal Telegraph Company.

CONTESTED ELECTION CASES.

Mr. BURR offered a resolution declaring that from the nature of its duties, the Committee on Elections was a judicial body, and that in deciding contested election cases, the members thereof should act according to all the rules of law without partiality or prejudice, as if under a special oath in each case.

The previous question was seconded by a vote of 72 to 34.

Mr. KELSEY, of New-York, moved to lay the resolution on the table, stating that it cast an imputation on the Committee of Elections.

Mr. GARFIELD suggested an amendment, extending the same principle to all members of the House in voting in the contested election cases. The amendment was not laid on the table—yeas 44, nays 130—and it was adopted by a vote of yeas 136 to nays 38.

APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bills. It was ordered to be printed and made the special order for Wednesday next.

Mr. DAWES stated to the House that the figures composing the bill compared with the estimates, and that there were several legislative provisions in the bill rendered necessary in order to cut off abuses; and he moved to suspend the rules so that an order should be made that the usual point of order cannot be made against those provisions in Committee of the Whole.

After considerable discussion the motion was agreed to.

GEORGIA AND THE INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

The House then proceeded to the business on the Speaker's table, as follows:

Reply of the General of the army to the call for information on Mr. BROOKS' resolution as to the authority for certain military officers acting as a Committee of Elections in the Georgia Legislature, stating that they are not acting as such Committee, but as a Board outside of the Legislature, to assist Gen. TERRY in the execution of his most unpleasant office and duties imposed on him by an act of Congress.

Mr. BROOKS addressed the House on the subject, contending that the military authorities had no power whatever to interfere with the organization of the Legislature of the State of Georgia.

Mr. MORGAN protested against these accumulated acts of usurpation, not only on the part of Congress, but on the part of the Executive.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, defended the Executive and General TERRY. He said that General TERRY had only done what General MEADE had done on the first organization of the Georgia Legislature—undertaken to determine what members were eligible. That was authorized by all the Reconstruction acts.

Mr. BROOKS asked Mr. BUTLER to point to the acts giving such authority.

Mr. BUTLER, in reply, referred to section 11 of the act of July 19, 1867, giving authority to the General of the army to act in this reconstruction matter. He knew that there had come up a report from the Associated Press of the South, which never reported in favor loyalty, but always in favor of secession and rebellion, (and he hoped to see that monopoly put down,) that General TERRY had organized a Military Commission to try a member of the Georgia Legislature for perjury; but that was not so. He had only appointed a Board of Government officers to find out who were and who were not eligible; he spoke whereof he knew when he affirmed that the action of General TERRY had been and would be sustained by the Administration, and that Georgia would be reconstructed in the interest of loyalty.

After further discussion between Messrs. BUTLER, MORGAN, VOORHEES and others, the papers were referred to the Committee on Reconstruction.

THE VIRGINIA BILL.

Mr. FARNSWORTH moved to pass over all intervening business on the Speaker's table, in order to take up the Virginia bill with the Senate amendments. The motion was agreed to, the Democrats voting in the negative. The bill was then taken up, and the Senate substitute was read.

Mr. FARNSWORTH moved to concur in the Senate substitute. Not, however, because it his provisions were presented originally he would have supported them. Some of them he thought very laughingly drawn, and they would do more harm than good; but he made the motion because he thought that to throw the question open again to a sea of discussion, and to keep Virginia longer out of representation, would be a greater evil than to adopt the Senate bill.

Mr. COX asked whether the passage of the Senate bill would not be yielding up the position of the House without even the chance of a Committee of Conference?

Mr. FARNSWORTH replied that that was a question for the House.

Mr. BINGHAM said that it would be borne on the journal of the House that more than three to one of the members had declared for the admission of Virginia without conditions. That vote would commend itself to the approval of the country. He believed it was not in the power of Congress by exacting fundamental conditions in the admission of a State, to enforce what could not be legitimately enforced on all other States. That being so, he asked that the State of Virginia be admitted under the Senate bill.

Mr. COX suggested that the Senate bill was an obnoxious act the bill reported by the Reconstruction Committee, and which was voted down by the House.

Mr. BINGHAM replied that it was not quite so obnoxious. He hoped the House would concur in the Senate amendment. His chief purpose was to state to the gentlemen on his own side of the House—

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts—Which side of the House is that? [Laughter.]

Mr. BINGHAM, (indignantly,)—The gentleman is very wise. He has beyond his peers. He cannot read me out of the party with which I am associated, nor can he blot out my record. Vulgarity is not wit, assumption is not power. There was no occasion for the inquiry. A wit's a feather and a fool's a rod. An honest man is the noblest work of God. [Laughter and much excitement on the floor.]

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, took the floor, and the interest in the discussion seemed to be on the increase. He said that he would begin where the gentleman from Ohio had left off; not with a misquotation, but simply to say that he had never threatened to read the gentleman out of the Republican Party. Nobody could do that but himself. Whether he had done that in passing the Virginia bill through the House by a snap judgment, and with the aid of his Democratic allies, the country would judge. Whether the gentleman was to have an ovation when he went to Virginia, he did not know, but he had seen some hint of that kind in the papers. He should be present in spirit, where he could look on, not embodied, and see the Virginians toasting the man whom all their papers announced as the murderer of Mrs. SURRATT. [Excitement.] What a sight! He referred to the eulogy passed by the gentleman from Ohio on the Virginia Constitution, and said that it was not the work of Virginian statesmen, but of "carpet baggers" and scallawags and negroes from the fields. He regarded the conditions of the bill as a notice to Virginia and all the country that if she did not maintain in spirit and in truth the spirit of the Reconstruction acts, Congress held and claimed, and with the help of God and of the loyal people of the country would exercise the power to place her back again where she had been. He did not know what new light the gentleman from Ohio had gone which induced him to support the Senate bill, which was substantially the bill reported by the Reconstruction Committee.

Mr. FARNSWORTH said he understood very well the allusions made by Mr. BUTLER to the acting Chairman of the Reconstruction Committee, and he had a word to say on that subject. He would not allow himself to be instructed in Republicanism by the gentleman from Massachusetts. He had been a Republican for twenty-five years, when the gentleman from Massachusetts was claiming fugitive slaves all over the State. [Laughter and clapping of hands on the Democratic side.] He had been doing all he could at the Chicago Convention for the nomination of a Republican President, when the gentleman from Massachusetts was at the Charleston Convention voting for JEFF. DAVIS. [Laughter.] He had voted for the Republican Party in 1860, when the gentleman from Massachusetts was voting for BRECKENRIDGE, of Kentucky. He knew the gentleman's facility for getting on the popular side, and he knew his conviction and conversion was so sudden that it shamed that of St. Paul. [Laughter.] And he knew that the gentleman was something like Peter when he deserted his Master. His desertion was so recent that he was obliged to curse and swear to make people believe that his desertion was genuine. [Laughter.] So the gentleman from Massachusetts was obliged to be exceedingly radical in order to make people believe that his conversion was genuine. [Laughter.] He understood that the gentleman's attack was on the gentleman from Ohio, (Mr. BINGHAM,) but he would probably have named him, too, only he knew that he (FARNSWORTH) had a chance to reply.

Mr. BUTLER said that his reason was that he had held the floor by that gentleman's courtesy, and therefore he did not think it well to arraign him at that time for his sins. [Laughter.]

Mr. FARNSWORTH, continuing his remarks, reminded the House that Mr. BUTLER had opposed him every time that he tried to introduce a bill for the admission of Virginia, and had stated the last time, two days before the recess, that the Committee could not legislate.

Mr. BUTLER remarked that the evidence he then wanted was as to the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment.

Mr. FARNSWORTH said that that was most remarkable, because three days before that the Secretary of State had notified Congress that Virginia had ratified the Fifteenth Amendment. [Laughter.] It was the gentleman from Massachusetts who had barred the door against Virginia, and would bar it to-day but that he knew it to be inevitable that the bill would pass.

Mr. WARD said he would support the Senate bill, as he understood it to contain all the essential fundamental conditions that were contained in the bill as reported from the Reconstruction Committee.

Mr. MORGAN opposed the substitute, and said that the action towards Virginia the Forty-first Congress would be known in history as the perfidious Congress.

Mr. COX took the same ground and asked the Republican side whether they would dare to stamp the brand of inferiority on New-York or Ohio, that this bill stamped on Virginia; whether they would dare to interfere with the common school system or the jury system of New-York or Ohio.

Mr. LOGAN said he was one of those who had voted for the admission of Virginia free of conditions and would do so again under similar circumstances, but he would now vote for the Senate bill. He would inquire who it was that had been working in the lobbies of the Senate to have the bill sent back to the House, so that some gentleman might have an opportunity of flagellating, in language peculiar to himself, his fellow members; nor would he enter into personalities. He had not, himself, been a Republican so long as to allow the moss to grow over him, and, therefore, he did not propose to canvass anybody's action. But neither would he allow any other person to be a censor over him. He did not see any inconsistency in voting now for this bill on the very statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts himself; that the conditions imposed were a mere notice to Virginia that she had better behave herself.

Messrs. PITCH and KELLOGG, who had originally supported Mr. BINGHAM's bill, announced their intention, without approving the Senate bill, to vote for it.

Mr. MCCARTHY, sarcastically, invited all the penitents to come up at once and make confession. [Laughter.]

Mr. FARNSWORTH's motion was agreed to and the Senate substitute concurred in by a strict party vote—yeas 126, nays 57.

Mr. MCCARTHY moved to suspend the rules for the purpose of offering a resolution to remove burdens and restrictions imposed by the sanitary laws of the State of New-York. Rejected.

THE M'GARRAHAN CLAIMS.

Mr. BINGHAM moved to suspend the rules for a resolution authorizing the Judiciary Committee to take testimony in the McGarrahan case. Rejected.

ADJOURNMENT.

An effort was made to have an evening session for debate, but it failed, and the House at 5 o'clock adjourned.

THE NATIONAL BANKS.

Their Present Condition—Reply of the Comptroller to Certain Inquiries—Valuable Statistics.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Some time ago the House of Representatives passed a resolution calling for this information required by the second section of the act of March 3, 1869, entitled "An act regulating the reports of National Banking Associations." The Secretary of the Treasury furnished in reply a statement of the Comptroller of the Currency, in which the latter says:

"Of the 1,600 banks included in the statement, one bank was suspended by entire reorganization bearing the same name, three banks never completed their organization, sixty-two banks have gone into involuntary liquidation and in the hands of receivers are doing no business and earning no dividends; 128 banks in active operation, from various causes have declared no dividend since March 3, 1869, leaving 1,404 banks that have declared and reported dividends. Six banks, organized since the passage of the act, are not included in the statement, none of which have yet reported dividends. The average capital of dividend-paying banks is $403,024,424. The dividends declared the amount to be $32,616,118. The net earnings in excess of dividends declared the amount to be $8,224,224. The average percentage of discounts upon capital is five and sixteen hundredths; average percentage of net profits, embracing dividends and net earnings in excess of dividends, six and thirty-eight hundredths.

NEW MAGAZINES, &c.

—The latest—and, so far as we may judge, the best—of ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S novels is continued in Lippincott for February, in which we likewise find the conclusion of ROBERT DALE OWEN'S interesting story, "Among the Breakers." A paper on "The Penn Family" contains a brief sketch of the great Admiral to whose bravery England owes the acquisition of the Island of Jamaica, and of his son WILLIAM, whose name has a prominent place in the political and religious annals of Pennsylvania. Details, judiciously selected, concerning their descendants, many of which have been hitherto unknown to the public, will be found worthy of perusal. The story entitled "Under False Colors," is sensational and dramatic rather than artistic. It is faulty in construction, and the devices resorted to by the writer are over familiar to most readers of fiction. A good idea lies at the root of the paper, on "Our Geographical Sponsors," but the subject is susceptible of more comprehensive treatment. The chapter facetiously called "High Life," gives us some pleasant descriptions of the dwellings in the Canton of Valais, and an interesting account of the ascent of the Gemmi. Other articles of more or less significance, in the quality of which there is a conspicuous difference, complete the contents of this magazine.

—The February Harper's is an unusually good number. The variety of its contents is surprising, and the articles are well chosen and judiciously placed. Among the rest we find the whole of Lord LYTTON'S new comedy in rhyme, "Walpole; or, Every Man has his Price." This will of course attract much attention. It exhibits the author's characteristic beauties and blemishes, but will be generally admitted to be a carefully balanced work of art. The plot is good, the situations possible, and the verse—barring some occasional slips in rhythm—is neat and polished. Historical facts and probabilities are faithfully adhered to, and the comedy is altogether a very interesting one. Whether it will succeed on the stage is more doubtful. Besides this, Harper's is almost embarrassing in its riches, and shows to advantage beside its contemporaries, most of which are uncommonly dull.

—Of what may, we suppose, be called the Anglo-American magazines, since they are published in both countries, Blackwood and Macmillan for January are promptly out. The former has four articles of note—a review, highly laudatory, of course, of Lord LYTTON'S comedy, a paper on Mr. FROUDE and Queen MARY, one on the Suez Canal, and a flaming attack on Mrs. STOWE in relation to the BYRON business. Macmillan has a scholarly but rather heavy air, and includes one or two archæological essays of value. There is a strong article on Admiralty Reform, a paper on the Anarchy of London, by THOMAS HUGHES, M. P., and a temperate and well written disquisition on the Irish Land Question, by an English landlord, Sir EDWARD STRACHEY.

The imprint of MACMILLAN vouches for the solid merit of a new London magazine which is being well circulated in this country. It is devoted to Therapeutics, is called The Practitioner, and has just reached its nineteenth number. Many of its articles have been written by the most eminent medical and scientific essayists of England, and it undoubtedly represents the most enlightened and advanced phases of clinical thought and culture.

—The paper that will perhaps attract most attention in the new North American Review is "Railway Problems in 1869," by Mr. CHARLES F. ADAMS, Jr., of which we spoke on Sunday. The article is outspoken and powerful, and its effect, we may hope, will be neither superficial nor temporary. No subject is of more immediate consequence, or more pregnant of momentous future results, and it is well that its discussion should be continued by a writer who has previously shown his ability to do it justice. The other articles in this number are: "The Let-alone Principle," by SIMON NEWCOMB; "Indian Migrations," by LEWIS H. MORGAN; "An Ancient Creed," by KARL BLIND; "The Ecclesiastical Crisis in England," by GOLDWIN SMITH, and "The Treasury Reports," by GAMALIEL BRADFORD. The Review ends with its customary array of book notices.

—The Journal of Psychological Medicine for January (D. APPLETON & Co.) well sustains the reputation of this able and useful quarterly. It publishes seven important articles, the titles and authors of which are as follows: 1. "Idiocy, as the Effect of Social Evils, and as the Creative Cause of Physiological Education," by EDWARD SEGUIN, M. D. 2. "Hereditary Influence (Hereditè) in Mental Disease," by JAMES J. O'DEA, M. D. 3. "Physical and Moral Transmissions from Parents to Children," by E. P. LE PRONON. 4. "Electro-Physiognomy," by M. L. EDGEWORTH, M. D. 5. "Helvetius," by T. EDWARDS CLARK, M. D. 6. "A Review of the Literature of Insanity for the Year 1868," by JEROME C. SMITH, M. D. 7. "Monsters and the Law," by T. EDWARDS CLARK, M. D. There is, besides, a report from Dr. D. F. LINCOLN on the new anæsthetic, hydrate of chloral. The preparation of this agent is simple. It is formed, after LIEBIG'S method, by passing a stream of chlorine through absolute alcohol until it comes over unchanged. The thick fluid remaining behind is chloral. Water being added, the chloral is converted into its hydrate. Some of its advantages seem to be that it produces no nausea and vomiting as do large doses of morphine and chloroform; that it does not affect the appetite, does not constipate, and causes no unpleasant symptoms of the bladder. No evil secondary results have been observed, even after using it for weeks at a time. It is an agent of great power, and Dr. LINCOLN thinks we may look for numerous reports of benefit derived from its use; and not improbably for death from overdoses. The number winds up, as usual, with profuse miscellaneous reports of cases, experiments, &c., and the periodic chronicle of the Physiology and Pathology of the Brain and Nervous System.

—The current issue of the American Law Review (LITTLE & BROWN) has articles on "Proximate and Remote Cause," "Warranty of Seaworthiness in Time Policies," "The Law of Insanity," "Campbell's Lives of Lyndhurst and Brougham," "Digest of the English Law Reports," "Digest of Cases decided in the Supreme Court of the United States," and a "Selected Digest of State Reports." Most of these articles are from pens of first-rate ability, and the Review seems to us in all respects worthy of the niche it was established to fill. The book notices in this number are acute and workmanlike, and the arrangement and typography deserve the praise that commonly belongs to publications that bear the same imprint.

—We have received from J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co. the first number of a new Universal Pronouncing Dictionary of Biography and Mythology, which is designed to be of a comprehensive character, and to be included within forty-five parts. The general and special features of the work—some of the latter being unique—are such as justify the expectation that this Biographical Dictionary will be the best in our language. It will be observed that it promises to give the correct pronunciation of names, and this is done by affording not the usual Anglicised method alone, but that of the tongue constituting the vernacular of the individual described. In addition to its other excellent characteristics the Bibliographical References that follow the chief articles strike us as of singular value. These guide the student at once to the authorities he should consult for more ample information than even the Dictionary's generous limits can afford. We are glad to chronicle the beginning of so useful and thorough a publication. The first number certainly furnishes every indication that it will prove a substantial boon to the literary community and a permanent credit to its publishers.

Election of a United States Senator by the Florida Legislature.

From the Tallahassee (Fla.) Sentinel, Jan. 11.

These members of the Legislature who insisted upon bringing on a new election for a United States Senator, in place of Hon. ABRAM GILBERT, whose election they claim to have been illegal, have at last succeeded in carrying their point. A very exciting struggle took place in the Senate, and lasted for several days; but that body refused to go into the election. The Assembly, where those in favor of the movement had a large majority, took one ballot on Tuesday, which resulted in no choice, and at 12 o'clock yesterday met again, for the purpose of proceeding with the election. At the same time the Senators appeared and were invited by the Assembly to seats within the bar, and permitted to cast their votes for Senator, the intention being to make, in this way, a joint convention in compliance with the requirements of the law. The roll of the Assembly was first called, and then, on motion, after much discussion and confusion, the names of the Senators present were called by the Clerk of the Assembly, and the votes recorded. The result was thirty-four votes, a large majority, for Judge O. H. HART, and sixteen votes scattering.

If Mr. GILBERT'S election was irregular and illegal, and if this election is regular and legal, then Judge HART will be entitled to his seat in the United States Senate, and he certainly will reflect no discredit upon the State which he represents; but it is impossible to state now what the effect of this election may be. The decision will rest with the Senate of the United States.

A member of the Kentucky House, who was a member of the Confederate Congress, last week made a speech in which he earnestly denounced repudiation of the national debt, and asserted that he wished to see no more war in this country. Thus far the State of West Virginia has contracted no public debt. Governor STEVENSON, in his late Message, said the State was undoubtedly liable for its proportion of the debt of Virginia contracted prior to Jan. 1, 1861, and advised that steps be taken to adjust this debt on fair and equitable terms, at the same time saying he thought the amount was small.

Chicago recently sent some of its prominent citizens to California, and now San Francisco has its joke in Chicago. The Chicagoans wanted to visit points of interest in California, and asked for free passes on the State railroads. They were freely given, and then the Chicagoans inquired how they should get to the depot. "By the street cars," answered the official. "Will we have to pay on them?" "Well," responded the astonished railroader, "I suppose not. Here is a bunch of car tickets for each of you. They are good for all street railroads in the city." They pocketed the tickets, took their leave, and made their excursion. A few days later they called on the railroad men, and said that they had sold up all their street car tickets, and would be obliged for passes to-day.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Good Legislation and Bad—Immigrants to South Carolina—Crime—Social Equality—Items.

From Our Own Correspondent.

COLUMBIA, Monday, Jan. 17, 1870.

The legislation thus far carried through by the General Assembly of this State bears some resemblance to that body itself—is mixed, some good and some bad. Of the former, the good kind is the act repealing the Township law of last session. The Township law is one of the several instances of New-England legislation for South Carolina. The system of townships which suits Massachusetts, with its dense population and clustering towns and hamlets, has been found to be a dead failure in sparsely-inhabited South Carolina. The confidence with which our representatives from Massachusetts—well versed in New England's wants—enacted the Township law last year, illustrates the crude statesmanship under which this unfortunate State is ruling. These statesmen never for a moment reflected that what was good for Massachusetts was fatal to South Carolina. The expense of keeping up this system in this State proved to be about ten times as great as in New-England. Messrs. GORDON, JILLSON and WRIGHT (colored,) the champions of the expensive law, are all from the North—the two former from New-England and the last from Philadelphia. The repeal of this unreasonable law may be mentioned as one of the very best of the present session.

As examples of the very worst kind of legislation, may be cited two bills now before the General Assembly, and both likely to pass—those to extend the corporate limits of the cities of Charleston and Columbia, and to have new elections of city officers. The motive in both cases is the same—to get the present municipal officers out of the way, and to get in others more acceptable to the leaders of the Republican Party. The incumbents have merely grown unpopular with their own party, and must give place to favorites. The new officers to be elected, if the bill become a law, will be Republicans also. In Columbia the case is slightly different. Here the incumbents are Democrats; and this is the objection to them. It is a plain case of political legislation; and does not excite surprise in either party.

Another piece of peculiar legislation is the act authorizing the State Treasurer to pay the interest on certain State bonds in coin. The history of this matter is brief: A year or two ago these bonds were worth from ten to fifteen cents in the dollar. Certain capitalists bought up large sums of them at those low figures. These same capitalists are now found to be the moving power in getting through this act to have the interest paid in coin. It is rumored, and the rumor has every line of probability, that bribery was liberally used to get the act through. One effect has been to run up State securities and bonds of all kinds on Wall-street; and this is a good thing. But the taxpayers must be ground in the dust to furnish the coin.

IMMIGRANTS.

There is some activity in the immigration business, but the numbers brought into any one place are not large. The Immigration Society of Newberry, of which Mr. BOOZER is President, has recently brought in a good many. These were distributed to the counties of Newberry, Laurens, Fairfield and in Richland—all mid-State counties. A few Scotch laborers have been brought to Columbia, and they are doing well. One of our citizens, with whom I have conversed about his employing these Scots, informs me that they do at least three times as much work in a day as negroes will. The result of this sort of thing will be that white laborers will get all the work to do, after a while, and the poor negro will go from bad to worse. Among the incoming people there are a few Swedes. These are industrious and thrifty.

CRIME.

Within the past month there have been in South Carolina seven murderous assaults, all told. Of these, four were successful—were murders. The seven persons assaulted were four whites and three colored. Eleven persons have been arrested by the State Constabulary (Republican officers) as the perpetrators of these murderous assaults. The eleven are all colored. One of them is a member of the General Assembly.

SOCIAL EQUALITY.

At the outset of the present Government of South Carolina, nearly two years ago, the white officials made no discrimination in their invitations to receptions, parties, balls, &c. That mode went on for over a year; but one by one the officials omitted to invite colored men and women, and now the races are separate. The negroes receive colored visitors at their receptions, and the whites receive whites. The negroes complain bitterly of this; but election day is several months off yet, and they must have patience. Mr. J. K. JILLSON, who is State Superintendent of Education, has expressed his opinion that the two races ought to be educated in separate schools, and the result is that he is denounced by negroes as an enemy to their race. This jealousy of social position is increasing, and there is evidently trouble ahead to come out of it. An action at law has been instituted in Charleston against Mr. FORD, the manager of the Academy of Music, for refusing to mix whites and blacks in the boxes of his house. This would consign the Academy of Music to the exclusive use of the negroes; but an expedient has been adopted to avert that result. The indictment has been postponed until the MAY term of the Court of Sessions; and before then the opera or theatrical season will have terminated. Negroes, under the Civil Rights bill, may be forced into theatres; but the whites will retire, so that the most that can be done will be to break up the business of theatricals, for the negro patronage alone is not sufficient to maintain it.

ITEMS.

It is generally understood that Governor SCOTT will be the Republican candidate for that office next term. The election is in November of this year.

The emancipation procession in Columbia this year numbered 140. Last year there were 500, and the year before 1,000. The members of the General Assembly voted themselves the regular per diem during the Christmas holidays, a recess of eleven days, and that item cost the State $12,000. There were twelve cases of house burning in this State within the past month—one dwelling, one store, one workshop, one stable, three barns, four gin houses with cotps in them, and one grist mill. These all belonged to the native white farmers. The Code of Procedure in the Courts of law, recently adopted by the South Carolina Legislature, is nearly a verbatim copy of the New-York Code. The codifiers were paid $15,000 to do this copying. Ice is to be manufactured the coming Summer at two places in this State—Columbia and Hamburg—by a German process. BOISE.

THE WRECK OF THE LADY GAY.—It is related that a relative of Mr. OWENS, clerk of the steamer Lady Gay, had a dream at 12 o'clock on Wednesday night, in which he saw the boat sink at a certain point in the river. He saw in his dream that no lives were lost, and that the boat was a complete wreck. He related his dream to his wife, and she being a sister of Mr. OWENS, the clerk, was very much distressed, and could not sleep. On reading the morning papers the dreamer was not a little surprised to learn that his dream had been verified, the Lady Gay having sunk past Grand Tower about eleven hours before the vision of the sinking boat appeared to him.—St. Louis Democrat, Jan. 11.

A PETRIFIED OYSTER.—We have been shown by Mr. EMMETT WOMACK an oyster shell containing a petrified oyster, discovered on the plantation of A. J. WOMACK, in Clay County, at a depth of sixty feet below the surface, in a bed of oysters and other marine shells, fully eighteen inches thick. The shells were found while digging a well. The spot where they were found is fully one hundred and fifty miles from the sea. The oyster shell, which is complete, is the largest we have ever seen. Young Mr. WOMACK is a student in Emory College, and designs presenting this great curiosity to the college for its museum.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, Jan. 13.

THE AMERICAN TURF.

Opening Meeting of the Jerome Park Club—Programme of the Fall of 1870—The New Race Course at Long Branch and Baltimore—The Fashionable Racing Circe of the Bay.

NO. III.

In our previous articles, the review of the racing season of 1869 was brought down to the close of the Fall meeting of the American Jockey Club at Jerome, to the brilliant success of which the extra dog's racing, which included the magnificent steeple chase, materially contributed. The venue of sport now changes to the "sunny South," and the gates of the Woodlawn Race Course, at Louisville, Ky., once more open to our retrospective gaze. The meeting commenced on Oct. 4, and the opening race was one of unusual interest. It was for the Galt House Stakes for three-year olds, two-mile heats, and brought together the famous crack Exchange, Versailles and Helmbold, with three others. Exchange won the race in two straight heats in 3:44, 3:41¾, with Helmbold second in the last heat. Sam won the Green Stake for untried three-year olds, but she had only two moderate ones to beat. On the second day six two-year olds came out for the Willard Hotel Stakes, of which hot three, Lynchburg, Littleton and Enquirer, were by Lexington, who stood his first season in Kentucky, to the great pecuniary advantage (!) of his then owner. The other three in the field were Maggie B. B. by Australian; Annette by Lexington, and ch. c. by Australian, dam Lavender, consequently full brother to Helmbold. A splendid race throughout between Lynchburg and Maggie B. B. resulted in favor of the former by a neck, in 1:48; Littleton third. Don Morriscey galloped away from her four opponents in the mile-heat race for the Livery Stable Purse, in 1:46¾, 1:47¾; and Crossland achieved a creditable victory in the dash of two miles over Charley Walker, Victory and two others; time—3:40. On the third day Charley Walker won the Railroad Purse, two-mile heats, in 3:43¾, 3:41, and Sue Morrissey the dash of a mile and a quarter, in 2:13¾. On the fourth day Wilkes Booth, a three-year-old colt, by Doncaster, dam Amanda Morehead, won the Louisville Hotel Stakes, mile heats, from Morgan Scout and four others, and Kitty Fox carried off the Fork House Purse in five heats from seven runners, the fastest heat being 1:46¾. Crossland beat Carrie Atherton, Exchange and Bowlin in the Turf Congress Stakes, four-mile heats; time—7:44, 7:33¾, and Rolly Rag, on the last day, won the Constitution Purse in three heats.

The Nashville, Tenn., meeting, commenced on Oct. 18, favored by the delightful weather of the Indian Summer, and under the promising auspices of brilliant and numerous assemblages of spectators, and large fields of first-class horses. The racing commenced with the Young America Stakes for two-year olds, a dash of one mile, for which the youngsters started. The high quality of the lot may be judged from the fact that it comprised, among others, Hamburg, the winner of the great two-year-old stake at Cincinnati, in the fastest time (1:48) on record for horses of that age, and who was subsequently sold for the large price of $7,000 with his engagements; Lynchburg and Enquirer, two of the illustrious Lexington's most promising sons; Maggie B. B., a fleet-footed daughter of imported Australian, and others. Hamburg's popular was so great that he was regarded as certain to win, but his chance was materially affected by his breaking away before the start and running a couple of miles before he was pulled up. After a short interval of respite, a start was effected, and after a magnificent contest between Maggie B. B. and Lynchburg, the filly won cleverly by a length in 1:48¾, Hamburg gaining third position. This time was the fastest mile ever run over the Nashville Course, and stamps the winner as a filly possessed of unusual speed. She was sold after the race to Captain TOM MOORE, of New-York, and passed into Captain T. G. MOORE'S training stable. She is entered this year in the great three-year-old stakes at Jerome Park and Saratoga, the Lambard Stakes and Kennel Stakes, where, in addition to her old Western opponents, Hamburg, Enquirer and Lynchburg, she will have to encounter the great Eastern champions, Remorseless, Pellie James, Sempa, Pinsons and Telegram. In the canting race for the Rock City Belle Stakes, for three-year olds, mile heats, that promising son of Vandal, Versailles, had little difficulty in disposing of his opponents, Rapid and Lorenzo, in 1:46¾, 1:47¾, 1:50. On the second day, for the Green Stakes, for untried three-year olds, an unnamed son of Vandal and a Wagner mare beat a field of six in three heats, winning the second and third. Helmbold commenced his brilliant career on the Southern turf by winning the Association Purse, two miles, in 3:43¾, beating such horses as Kitty Fox, Victory, Betty Bay and two others with consummate ease. He followed up his success the following day by beating Crossland and Charley Walker for the Merchants' Post Stake, two-mile heats, in 3:46¾, 3:41¾. Crossland was a great favorite, and the followers of the New-York stable won heavily on the race. Sue Morrissey sustained her first defeat since the change of her name from Fanny Ludlow, after her purchase at the Saratoga meeting, for Donovan beat her in the mile-heat race for the Association Purse for four-year olds. She won the first heat in 1:48, but pulled up lame after it, and Donovan had no difficulty in beating in consequence in 1:49¾, 1:52¾. On the fourth day, Versailles easily beat Nannie Douglas for the three-year-old Belmont Stakes, two-mile heats, and a great sensation was created by the three-year-old filly by Uncle Vic, dam Frosty, with a tide to 25 chance in the betting, beating a field of such horses as John Kilgour, Morgan Scout, Betty Bay and others in three heats for the Association Purse, Kilgour taking the first heat. On the fifth day, Rolly Rag won the mile-heat purse after a protracted contest of five heats, Victory winning the first two.

Progressing southward, we find the Memphis meeting commencing on Nov. 8 under most discouraging auspices of weather, which fortunately improved as the meeting continued. The Inauguration Post Stake, two-mile heats, was won by Helmbold, beating the favorite, Corsican, and Victory with great ease, the latter distanced; time—3:49, 3:39. The two magnificent two-year olds, Hamburg and Lynchburg, probably as fine racehorses as ever trod the American turf, came out for the Bradley Stakes, dash of one mile, and Hamburg beat his old opponent by half a length after a splendid race, in 1:51. Versailles won the Gayoso Stakes for three-year olds, mile heats, disposing without difficulty of John Kilgour and Nannie Douglas in 1:54, 1:54¾. Corsican won the Jockey Club Purse, mile heats—his favorite distance—from six opponents; and Donovan won the selling race, two-mile dash, from Betty Bay, Morgan Scout, Little Mack and Adelaide in 3:55. On the fourth day Lancer won the hurdle race, and Charley Walker the three-mile-heat race; the latter upsetting a great pot on Crossland, upon whom long odds were laid, and who was distanced in the second heat. In justice to Crossland, it must be stated that he was not in condition, having become stale after his long campaign. Helmbold, on the next day, met his old antagonist, Versailles, in the De Soto Stakes, two-mile heats, and beat him with ease in 3:44, 3:44¼. Then came the most interesting race of the meeting, the George Elliott Sequel Stake, for two-year olds, one mile, for which Hamburg, by Lexington, Lynchburg and Enquirer, by Lexington, and two others, by Lexington, started. Hamburg carried five pounds penalty for winning the Bradley Stake, as also did Enquirer in overweight, in consequence of his owner, General BUFORD, not having a light boy to ride him. The latter is in the same stable as Lynchburg, and General BUFORD fully intended winning with him, believing that at five pounds difference he could beat Hamburg. The race was a grand one, but to the general surprise, Enquirer, notwithstanding his overweight, won cleverly by half a length from the favorite Hamburg, in 1:48. Morgan Scout won the Green Stake, and Carrie Atherton the Chickasaw Cup Stake, four miles, beating Corsican, (upon whose winning long odds were laid,) Crossland and Kitty Fox; time—7:39. John Kilgour wound up the meeting by carrying off the Donation Purse from three others; his owner presenting the prize to the Orphans' Home.

The Metairie Fall meeting commenced on Nov. 27; the new seemingly invincible Helmbold winning the All Aged Sweepstakes, two miles, in 3:34¾, from three others. Corsican won the mile-heat race with ease, in 1:49¾, 1:48¾, beating eight competitors, and Lobelia the hurdle race. The two-mile-heat race was won by Carrie Atherton, and the three-mile race by Crossland, who also won the two-mile-heat race next day. John Kilgour won the three-year-old sweepstake, mile heats, and Corsican, invincible over a mile, beat Abe Bohr and Sarah McDonald, at that distance, in 1:47¾. On the sixth and last day, Morgan Scout beat a field of five, in the mile dash, in 1:47¼, and Helmbold walked away for the two-mile purse. Chalmette beat Jeff Jennings in a match, two miles, and Nannie McNairy was equally successful in her match against Sarah McDonald, dash of three quarters of a mile; the last race terminating the meeting.

The last meeting of the season was held at Mobile, under Captain WILLIAMSON'S management; the Magnolia Club, on account of the want of patronage, received the Fall previous, having determined only to give a Spring meeting. The racing commenced Dec. 12, with Carrie Atherton winning the two-mile-heat purse from Corsican and Donovan—the winning the first heat and being distanced in the second. Corsican beat Larkin and Whitecloud in a mile dash, and Larkin next day beat Lobelia and Sam at mile heats.

The prospects of the turf for the coming season are unusually bright and promising. At Jerome Park, Saratoga and Baltimore the entries for the various stakes are more numerous than in any previous year. The Nursery Stakes at Jerome Park for 1870, for two-year olds, has fifty-eight entries; the Lambard Stakes, for three-year olds, twenty-nine; the Travers Stakes and Saratoga Stakes, sixty-six and forty-seven respectively, and the Kentucky and Kenner Stakes, also at Saratoga, forty and twenty-five. The brilliant success which has annually attended the Saratoga meetings has induced the authorities to give two racing gatherings there in future, in July and August, and upwards of $40,000 will be given for the purpose. Two new courses are in active process of construction, one at Long Branch, the property of the sport of kings, the other, the property of the Maryland Jockey Club, and will be inaugurated in the Fall of this year. The opening meeting will be one of surpassing interest to turfmen, for the stakes to be run for are of unprecedented value. The principal is the Dinner Party stakes for three-year olds, $1,000 each, half forfeit, dash of two miles, for which thirty of the flower of American thoroughbreds are entered. Besides this rich stake, there are the Breakfast Stake, for four-year olds, $500 each, half forfeit, with twelve subscribers; the Supper Stakes, for two-year olds, one mile, $100 each, half forfeit, with twenty-five subscribers; and the Boyle Stakes, (named in honor of the Governor of the State,) a most liberal and enthusiastic turfman, of $500 each, $200 forfeit, with $2,000 added, four-mile heats, for which no less than eighteen horses are entered. With such highly-interesting races and rich stakes in prospect, the inauguration meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club at Baltimore will be the most important event of the racing season of 1870.

At Long Branch, N. J., a new race course is in active process of construction, and will be completed in time for the holding of the opening meeting in July next. Possessing unusual facilities of easy access to New-York, and unrivalled by the visitors of that fashionable seaside resort, Long Branch, the race meetings there are certain to be brilliantly successful. To the liberality and enterprise of Mr. JOHN CHAMBERLIN, a warm patron of the turf, the public are indebted for this new institution for enjoyment and pleasure. The programme of the first Summer meeting is not yet announced, but as the racing management will be invested in the hands of an association of experienced turfmen, it will doubtless be one of unusual attraction.

The comparative merits of the thoroughbred stree during the past year, is an interesting but delicate subject of discussion among racing men. Lexington, Leamington, Eclipse, Australian, Daniel Boone, Uncle Vic, Planet and Vandal stand successfully at the head of the list of racing stallions. Lexington rejoices most in the performance of his great two-year-old son, Hamburg, who is credited with the fastest mile on record at that age. Leamington can boast of such fliers as Lynchburg, Enquirer, (who at Memphis beat Hamburg at a mile,) and Miss Alice, Annie Mace, &c.—a bright galaxy of fleet ones for any horse in his first season. Eclipse is well sustained by such great racers as Norragansett and Fanny Ludlow, who has shown greater speed than any horse on the turf for over a mile. Cottrill does high credit to Daniel Boone, as a stallion, considering the fine speed he showed in his race at Jerome Park fairly electrified the lookers-on, and was perhaps never excelled, if equaled, on the American turf. Helmbold and Maggie B. B. do better to Australian's merits as a sire; and Hermo and Versailles will not allow Vandal to claim distinctions to be sent to pasture. The season Kentucky's progeny will make their début, and it remains to be seen if the bright renown he acquired on the turf will be maintained and perpetuated at the stud.

The New System of Custom House Cartage.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Having for several years, and until quite recently, been in a position to obtain a thorough knowledge of the whole subject of Custom House carting, I beg leave to offer a few words in regard to the system recently adopted by the Collector of the Port. That this system is right and just, both to the Government and the importer, no person at all conversant with the subject can have the slightest doubt. From the time goods arrive until they are actually delivered to the importer, the lien of the Government is in the nature of actual ownership, and nothing can be clearer than that until such delivery the goods should remain in the hands of officers appointed by the Government.

Packages of goods have, under the old system, been tampered with, and in some cases exchanged while on the way to the warehouses and the public store, and the facilities for fraud were constant, and could hardly have been increased. Under the new system, the heavy bonds required, viz., $50,000 for each district and $5,000 additional for each cart employed, with the fact that the contractors are men of large experience in the business, and of excellent character, would seem to secure the faithful performance of the several contracts. I believe the experience of a single month will demonstrate that the Collector has decided wisely in adopting the new system. The great reduction in the rates of cartage is an important item to both Government and importers. I am unable to see any injustice to any party. Undoubtedly "a great leak has been stopped." The Collector of the Port being held responsible by the Government, must have the control in all questions of this kind. After patient and thorough investigation of the whole subject, I, Gouverneur Morris, approved upon the city plan, and he is entitled to great credit and the thanks of both Government and importers for having settled, with perfect justice to all, a question which has always been considered most troublesome and annoying. In this instance, at least, change will be found to be substantial and not merely nominal.

The Canals and Reciprocity.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Many thanks for the late timely articles on the Lake trade. Allow me to suggest that one cause of the falling off may be the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty. The quiet working people—not only of Canada West, but of New-York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Michigan—feel that there has been quite enough of "humbug" legislation, and that we ought to have some "reciprocity" practical free trade between Western Canada and the United States the same as between any two States of the Union, and then an enlargement of the Erie Canal, Railroads, &c., will be built as fast as business requires. YONKERS, Tuesday, Jan. 18, 1870.

Removal of the Episcopal Theological Seminary.

A special meeting of the trustees of the General Theological Seminary of the Episcopal Church, met last week and transacted important business. A committee had been previously appointed to report on the expediency of removing the Seminary from its present location to another site, and the Board of Trustees met to hear the report prepared by the committee. The document was of some length, gave a full account of the condition and prospects of the institution, and closed it with a recommendation to remove it elsewhere.

The Seminary block in Twentieth-street, between Ninth and Tenth-avenues, was conveyed years ago by CLEMENT C. MOORE, to trustees, as a location for an Episcopal Theological School. It contains sixty-four city lots, and is valued, with the buildings and land west of Tenth-avenue, at the price of original valuation of the ground, it was but $4,000! The Committee, consisting of Rev. Dr. FRANCIS VINTON, Messrs. HENRY E. PIERREPONT, CAMBRIDGE LIVINGSTON, EDWARD HAIGHT, EDWARD F. DE LANCEY and WILLIAM H. BELL, give the following reasons for removing the institution:

The Seminary is abiding here at an annual rental, a sum equal to 6 per cent of $50,000, besides being taxed by assessments for improving the streets, sidewalks, sewers and other expenditures of the City of New-York. The sum on account of assessments for current improvements is more than $30,000. In this point of view, it is too expensive to remain where we are, even though we possessed an income superfluous for the cost of administration. Dwellings for Professors, the students, the library, and other incidental charges for the proper administration of affairs. A central site enormous, and subject to continuous assessments from the power of the City Fathers, may not be justified even under the hypothesis of an overflowing treasury, unless it should be shown that the prosperity of the Seminary is so bound up with the City of New-York, the comfort of its Professors, and the economy of supporting them, and other considerations—outweigh the social and spiritual and secular disadvantages.

The trustees adopted the report of the Committee. It has not yet been determined where to locate the new Seminary. The present number of students in it is seventy-three.

DOUBLE DIVORCE SUITS.

A Wife Charges her Husband with Cruelty, and he Charges her with Adultery—The Case before the Supreme Court—An Old Naval Officer a Party.

The case of JOHN J. GLASSON vs. MARGARET A. GLASSON, came before Judge BARNARD yesterday in the Special Term of the Supreme Court, by virtue of an order made by that Judge on the 21st of December last, directing a "circuit jury" to hear and determine the matters at issue. Counsel for the defendant desired a postponement of the trial, and urged the fact that an appeal had been taken to the General Term. After argument the presiding Judge determined to have the special jury impanelled, and made an order that the trial should proceed on Monday next.

The facts of the case are rather unusual. It appears from the papers in the suit that Mr. and Mrs. GLASSON were married in this City on the 20th of June, 1844; that of the issue of this marriage, three children, two of whom are now young men, now living, and aged 20 and 22 years respectively. Mr. GLASSON, the father, claims to be now 54 years of age, formerly a Commodore in the United States Navy, and for forty-six years a sailor in some capacity in the service of the Government. The Commodore claims that adultery was committed by his wife with one JOHN B. HOWELL, of Providence, R. I., at No. 78 Charles-street, Providence, at different times in the months of September, October, November and December, 1868; that since Dec. 2, 1868, his wife has been constantly living with Howell, in Providence, constantly in his housekeeper, but really for the purpose of adulterous intercourse. The plaintiff further states that he did not know of this until March 20, and that since that date he has not cohabited with her. The suit it appears was commenced soon after. The wife, in her answer, denies all the allegations as to adultery with Mr. HOWELL, and solemnly avers that she has been living in his house simply as his housekeeper. The papers in the case show that years ago Mrs. GLASSON commenced a suit against her husband for the purpose of obtaining a separation from his board, on the ground of cruelty and inhuman treatment. She says that at certain times he kicked, struck, beat and bruised her in a most shameful manner. On the 30th of December, 1868, Judge JOHN A. SCOTT, of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, granted a decree to her for a separate maintenance, and made a provision for her, so long as he was in receipt of the same sum as then as a United States naval officer, she must be paid from his salary at the rate of $50 per month. At that time he owned considerable real estate. Between the time of the recording of this judgment and the commencement of the suit by the husband for adultery, a suit has been commenced in the Supreme Court, at Providence, R. I., by Mrs. HOWELL against her husband, JOHN B. HOWELL, for the purpose of obtaining a decree for adulterous intercourse. Mr. HOWELL claims to be a good and faithful husband, and while admitting that he has left Mrs. GLASSON, insists that it is only in the capacity of a virtuous housekeeper of his that he has any acquaintance with her.

An effort was made yesterday to postpone the trial here until the Howell case could be disposed of in Providence. Mr. GLASSON's affidavit was read to the effect that he has reliable information that his wife had made her boasts that the trial should not come off in January, notwithstanding the fact that Judge BARNARD had ordered it to be tried. She claimed that she could employ certain additional counsel to put it off until another Judicial District could be assigned. She also had said that if he would give her a house and lot she would cease her fight; otherwise she would fight to the last. The trial will be continued on Monday next.

KILLED WITH A STONE.

A Colored Woman Tried and Acquitted on a Charge of Causing the Death of her Paramour.

A young colored woman named LYDIA ANN GRIFFIN, was arraigned in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday, on an indictment for manslaughter, being charged with killing her paramour, HENRY GRANT, also colored. Judge BIXBOND presided, Assistant District-Attorney FELLOWS conducting the case for the prosecution. The latter asked for a verdict of manslaughter in the fourth degree in his opening address to the jury. SAMUEL CUMMINGS, colored, was the only witness against the prisoner. He testified that he was with GRANT on the 15th of October last; that he had told him that his "old woman" (meaning the accused) ; that they found her in Baxter-street; that on their way to GRANT's residence, at the corner of Ridge and Rivington streets, the prisoner went into a yard at the corner of Grand and Baxter-street; that when she came out she threw something at the deceased, hitting him in the head and knocking him senseless. On cross-examination, CUMMINGS confessed that he had been sent to the Penitentiary for stealing. Drs. CUSHMAN and SHIPS furnished evidence in regard to the post-mortem examination of the body of Mr. GRANT, showing that death was caused by compression of the brain, resulting from a fracture of the skull.

The prisoner subsequently told her story. She said she had lived with GRANT, and had never had any trouble with him. On the evening the deed was committed he came to her and asked her to accompany him to their place in Rivington-street, which she consented to do. On arriving at the corner of Canal and Baxter streets CUMMINGS urged GRANT, who had been drinking, to go into a house on that place. She remonstrated with CUMMINGS, who then applied a harsh name to her and struck her with his fist. She returned the blow, after which he drew a knife on her. While his hand was uplifted she lifted a stone and threw it at him, striking her paramour on the forehead. After a short charge by Judge BIXBOND, the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

Dr. Helmbold Robbed—Two Thousand Dollars' worth of Jewelry Carried Off.

The residence of Dr. H. T. HELMBOLD, No. 180 West Fourteenth-street, was entered by burglars about 6:20 P. M. last Friday while the family was at dinner. The thieves climbed into a second story window, and departed with property valued at $2,000. They had not time to take all the property, owing to the fact that Dr. HELMBOLD went up stairs as they were at their work, and then, fearing detection, they went off with what they had. The robbers left about $700 worth of jewelry, &c., behind them. The following are the articles, with their prices, which were stolen: Gold watch, $150.

One black enameled watch set with diamonds, $600; one necklace, $250; two sleeve buttons, jet and diamonds, $600; one finger ring, opal centre, surrounded by diamonds, $200; one breastpin, opal and diamonds, $200; one small finger ring, worth $150; one set coral earrings and breastpin, $150; handkerchief ring, $25. In addition to the above articles there were two watch chains, one long and one lady's, with black enameled slides. The thieves have not been captured.

Meeting of the Police Commissioners—A New Shield Ordered.

The Police Commissioners held a meeting yesterday afternoon, during which a number of transfers of patrolmen acting as roundsmen were made. A communication was received from F. S. MASSEY, President of the Fire Department of Brooklyn, asking permission to make connections between the fire telegraph and the Police telegraph of that City. The matter was referred to the Superintendent, with power to act. A resolution was passed that hereafter trials of policemen be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week. A resolution was also adopted ordering for the use of the Department shields for sixty Captains, 200 Sergeants and 2,000 patrolmen. These shields are of an entirely different pattern from those now in use, and are secured to the coat by a peculiar fastening that will render it impossible for one of them to be lost, except willfully.

Burglary in a Revenue Office—Suspicious Letter from the Thieves.

On Sunday night the office of WILLIAM E. CUMMINGS, Revenue Assessor of the First District, in Hunter's Point, was entered by thieves, who forced open the outer door of the large Tewksbury safe, but their tools failing them, they did not effectually enter the portion of the safe where the money and stamps were kept. They left behind them a crowbar and sledge hammer, and the following interesting letter:

MR. RAYMOND: You may think yourself very lucky that your safe was not broke open, or you would not feel so good on Monday morning.

Yours, most respectfully, HORACE GREELEY.

P. S.—Hope to give you a call some night. Please tell the editor of the Times that I have taken from Mr. Hazard his regular card, and he will have to send us a sample of our good. Address Horace Greeley and Nobody Else.

The Lane-Taylor Case.

Commissioner MANNERS yesterday concluded the taking of the testimony in the case of FRANK E. LANE, of the Fifteenth Precinct, charged with improper conduct by the woman LIDA TAYLOR. Sergeant HALLROW, of the Fifteenth Precinct, who was the only witness examined, testified that he was in charge of the desk when LANE brought the woman in, at 12:15 A. M. She appeared very much excited, but he could not say that she was under the influence of liquor. She then made no charge against LANE of raising her veil, but claimed that he had leered at her as she passed. The complaint was made to the Sergeant that LANE had followed her home, and had insulted her. The Sergeant testified that he had known LANE for years, and had never had any complaint against him. The case was then referred to the Board.

KINGS COUNTY SUPERVISORS.

Contracts Now Encumbered—Delinquent Jurors.

The regular meeting of the Kings County Supervisors was held yesterday. It was resolved to increase the fees of the Coroners for making inquests from $10 to $25 per case. It appeared from a communication from Coroners JONES and WHITEHILL, that their total receipts for inquests in 1869 amounted to $8,800, out of which they paid $2,400 for clerk hire and traveling expenses, leaving them $6,365 each.

A communication was received from the Commissioner of Jurors which set forth that the fines due by delinquent jurors amounted to $4,400. The Board was asked to take some action in the premises. The communication was referred to the Committee on Accounts.

Supervisor HOWELL moved for the appointment of a watchman, named JAMES DOLAN, at the County Jail, but the motion was referred to the Law Committee.

Supervisor HARMAN, of the Twentieth Ward, moved the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Board respectfully ask the Senators and Assemblymen of Kings County to secure the passage of such an act by the Legislature as shall always hereafter secure to the minority, representation in the Board of Supervisors, and Aldermen of each election district in said County.

Supervisor CASSIDY said that, as a greatly-abused Democrat, he would favor the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

A resolution was adopted, appointing Thos. T. Cornell, of the Twelfth Ward, Wm. H. Stilwell, of Gravesend, and DAVID HOAGLAND, of New-Lotts, Inspectors of Plank Roads in Kings County.

The Board then adjourned until Feb. 2.

The Fourth National Bank Trouble.

WILLIAM F. FELTMAN's examination, yesterday, on a charge of defrauding the Fourth National Bank of $7,000 by means of false entries, alleged to have been made while he was acting as bookkeeper, resulted in his being held to answer the charge of the Grand Jury. The evidence was to the effect that the accused confessed his guilt, but said that ROBERT COPELAND was the instigator of the fraudulent transactions, and that the $7,000 was shared between him and WILLIAM LEITH.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the credentials of Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, reflected for the late Senator FESSENDEN's unexpired term, were presented. A number of petitions were presented; among them one from citizens of Western New-York in regard to the lumber interests in that section, and one from the Buffalo Board of Trade against the continuance or renewal of the income tax. A resolution granting a pension to Mrs. LINCOLN, introduced by Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, was referred to the Finance Committee. Mr. SHERMAN's bill to provide a national currency of coin and notes, and to equalize the distribution and circulation of notes, was discussed at length by Messrs. SHERMAN, DAVIS, HOWE and SUMNER, but no action taken, and the Senate, after an Executive Session, at 4:47 P. M. adjourned.

In the House a number of petitions were presented for the abolition of the franking privilege, and for a reduction of the tax on shipbuilding. Mr. MUNGER presented a petition, signed by 154 citizens of Worcester, Mass., for a repudiation of the debt. Among the bills introduced were the following: To fix the compensation of letter carriers in cities at $1,200; to increase the salary of the Minister to China; to increase the number of United States Supreme Court Judges; for bounty to colored soldiers; to regulate the mode of determining the ratification of constitutional amendment; to regulate pensions on a gold basis; to provide for the health and safety of coal miners; to authorize the people of New-Mexico to form a Constitution and State Government preparatory to admission into the Union; and to extend the moneyorder system to branch Post Offices in large cities. Mr. WASHBURN's Postal Telegraph bill was referred to a Select Committee. The Appropriation bills, Legislative, Executive and Judicial, were reported and made the special order for to-morrow. A long debate was engaged in, principally between Messrs. BROOKS, of New-York, and BUTLER, of Massachusetts, on the Georgia question. The Senate Virginia bill was also discussed, Mr. BUTLER making a speech, in which he referred to the course of Messrs. BINGHAM and FARNSWORTH, who replied, and was finally agreed to by a vote of 136 to 57. At 5 P. M. the House adjourned.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The Senate met last evening. Mr. TWEED reported a bill amending the act chartering charitable societies. Among the bills introduced were those: Confirming the acts of Supervisors of New-York and Westchester Counties, and regulating the issue of life insurance policies. But little general business was transacted, and the Senate adjourned.

In the Assembly, yesterday, bills, among others, were introduced, to charter the Manhattan Market Company of New-York; and to amend the General Banking act. A resolution, instructing Congressional representatives to use their influence for the passage of a bill to reimburse parties drafted during the war, and who furnished substitutes or paid their commutation, was tabled for the day. An early adjournment took place.

GENERAL.

Advices from Hayti to the 11th inst., have been received. On and after Feb. 1, an export duty is to be imposed on coffee, of 4 cents per pound. The crop promises a large yield. Political affairs were quiet, with the exception of an unimportant disturbance in the southern part of the Republic.

At a fire which destroyed five small business houses in St. Joseph, Mo., on Sunday morning, WILLIAM FOTHER, a brother-in-law of ex-Congressman LOAN, was buried to death. A number of firemen, in trying to rescue his remains, were crushed by the falling walls, and one was killed, another fatally injured and three seriously wounded. A negro was also killed during the fire.

The barns, together with their contents, belonging to the parsonage of Columbia County, at Ghent, in this State, were burned yesterday morning. Loss, $10,000. Insurance partial.

At the Boston Theatre, during the last Sunday evening religious services, an alarm of fire was raised by the friends of a pickpocket who had just been detected at work and arrested. A panic followed the cry for a moment, but it was soon over, and no serious results followed.

Mrs. ARCHER, wife of JOHN ARCHER, of this City, threw herself from an attic window of her mother's house, in Boston, yesterday morning, in a fit of delirium, caused by sickness, and was instantly killed.

GEORGE H. HAWKINS, a clerk in the office of the Adams Express Company at Providence, R. I., was arrested on Saturday in that city, charged with embezzling the funds of the Company to the amount of $6,000. He confesses having taken the money, and also stated that $3,100 of the funds would be found at his residence. Search was accordingly made and this sum recovered.

A block of buildings on the corner of Market and Calhoun streets, in Brantford, Ont., was destroyed by fire on Sunday. Loss, $30,000.

In a private letter received at Ottawa, Ont., from RIEL, the leader of the Red River insurgents, it is reported that he is not in favor of annexation, and that it is not too late for the Canadian Government to come to an agreement, and thus settle the difficulties.

Prince ARTHUR, accompanied by his suite and Minister THORNTON, called on the President at the Executive Mansion yesterday. The visit lasted about twenty minutes, and was an informal affair, no speeches being made. The party afterwards visited the Senate and the House, occupying seats in the Diplomatic Gallery. In the House the Prince remained nearly an hour, and seemed much interested in the discussions.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER C. LANGDELL has been elected Dane Professor of Law in Harvard University, to succeed Professor THEOPHILUS PARSONS, resigned.

LOCAL.

The Common Council, yesterday, adopted a resolution to appoint CHAS. PETTIT Assistant City Librarian, in place of CHAS. BAULUS. Resolutions to appoint three additional clerks were laid over.

The trustees of the Episcopal Seminary in Twentieth-street have determined on its removal to another site.

The divorce suit of JOHN J. GLASSON vs. MARGARET GLASSON, which in some of its aspects is a very peculiar case, came up yesterday in the Supreme Court, Special Term, before Judge BARNARD. A "struck jury" having been ordered, efforts were made to postpone the trial, but this the Court would not permit, and after the jury were impanneled, the trial was ordered to proceed on Monday next.

By order of Major-General NEWTON, Mr. MEEHAN, with the United States tug General, is making an examination with a view to the removal of the wreck of the pilot boat J. P. Stewart, sunk in the main ship channel, outside of Sandy Hook.

Three prominent Wall-street bankers paid $1,000 each into the Registry in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, the money representing the penalties which were imposed on them for violating the Revenue law.

The Union Republican General Committee for 1870 last night adopted a constitution and by-laws for its government. The question of apportioning delegates was referred back to the Committee on Constitution for a report at the next meeting.

At Last!

The agony of Virginia is ended. The good sense of the House has averted the delay and the intrigue which any hesitancy in the acceptance of the Senate amendments would have occasioned. The Reconstruction Committee yesterday reported the bill as it came from the Senate, and the report was concurred in by a large majority. Only the signature of the President is needed to perfect the restoration of the State, and that is a certainty.

The act of admission would have been more gracious had it been unencumbered with conditions which appear to reveal an exacting and suspicious temper, but which after all are practically powerless. Of all the States which have regained fellowship in the Union under the terms of the Reconstruction acts, not one presented itself with a better title to unconditional and immediate recognition than Virginia. The grace of the recognition now accorded is marred by implied imputations upon the good faith of the people. What, under some circumstances, might have been an outrage, is greatly mitigated by the fact that the provisos imposed will be virtually inoperative. The bill as it has passed looks offensive, because clogged with conditions where all conditions are out of place. But they will neither hinder the restoration of the State nor lessen its usefulness, or retard its progress when restored. And bad as they seem to be, they are trifles compared with the tests which those who regard reconstruction simply as a partisan agency attempted to impose.

In the tardy justice which has been done to Virginia we have, let us hope, a pledge of more prompt and more generous action when Mississippi and Texas, in their turn, present themselves to realize the profits of completed reconstruction. The intolerant, unreasonable spirit which manifested itself against Virginia will doubtless reappear. But its inability to control either House has been made manifest. The contest about Virginia has at least rendered this service: it has shown that the better—and happily the stronger—portion of the Republican Party will keep faith with the Southern people. The strength which has sufficed to extricate Virginia from the toils of its enemies may be relied upon to secure fair play for Texas and Mississippi, and to discriminate between just and necessary requirements in the case of Georgia, and demands originating in sinister partisan influences. There is a fixed purpose to exact faithful compliance with the terms of the law, and in regard to Georgia to obtain guarantees against a recurrence of the treachery in which the measures now in progress there have their justification. But there is, at the same time, an apparent aversion to the disorganizing doctrine, which would forever represent reconstruction as an unfinished work.

It is noticeable that in this contest between good faith and bad faith—between magnanimity and malignity—the Senators from reconstructed States have been on the better side. Their native radical, and indebted to radicalism for their seats, they have steadily sustained the policy of conciliation, and have as steadily resisted propositions that would make finality in reconstruction impossible. To the reconstructed South we look for help as against proscription. Mississippi sends to Washington Senators bearing an appeal for the removal of lingering disabilities, and Southern Republicans generally echo the request. They see that the time is past when tests and disabilities could be useful, and they would have Congress cultivate a policy in which hate and punishment shall have no place. Here, these agencies are seen only theoretically; among the Southern people their baneful presence serves to foster irritation and to deprive the country of aid it can ill afford to lose.

Partisan Journalism—The Late Mr. Prentice.

It is not much that we have to say of the late Mr. PRENTICE! He was not an old man when he died, but he had been an editor since the time of the younger ADAMS. His working days numbered forty-five years. It is said that his latter years were clouded by misfortune. How gently his death falls upon the country; how soon he is forgotten! Yet the time was when the contemplation of the death of PRENTICE would have been like the going out of some particular star. This man filled a great place in the journalism of his day, and had a vast influence in American politics. Probably no one man has made so deep an impression on the Southwest as the editor of the Louisville Journal.

What was the nature of that influence? Mr. PRENTICE was not merely a man of peculiar and rare gifts; he was a partisan. He held great personal and political power because he surrendered his influence as an editor. He joined the Whig Party and remained its staunch and leal supporter. He was among the followers of HENRY CLAY, and was in journalism very much what HENRY CLAY was in statesmanship. In the character of the two men there were many elements in common—an impulsiveness, an élan, a fire and aggressiveness which was attractive in those easy, rough, generous, Western countries. There is much extravagance in such characters. How many bitter, cruel words this dead man has written, and yet it was his nature to write such things without malice, or deep-grounded anger. Such men took their cue from the times. They became editors just as other men become actors. And if it were set down for them to denounce Whig or Democrat, they did it just as Mr. BOOTH declaims against honor in Iago, and in favor of murder in Macbeth.

We can more correctly define the position of a man like Mr. PRENTICE by calling him a Partisan Chief. He fought under CLAY just as Colonel MOSBY did under General LEE, and did much the same service. While the great statesman remained aloof in the dignity of a sacred individuality,—never forgetting social grace and courtesy and the amenities of Senatorial and political life,—the humbler and less scrupulous writer was busy with defamation, misrepresentation, satire and invective. This was the editor's function in those days. Every great man had his editor, very much as the old-fashioned English country Squire had his clergyman to say grace, drink a glass of ale, and leave the table before the custards came. The editor was a retainer. He was the Gregory or Balthazar of the far-removed political Montagu, and did the biting of the thumbs. He had little voice in greater concerns. The honors and dignities and emoluments of political victories were never shared with him. An occasional clerkship or local dignity was his abundant reward.

Mr. PRENTICE did this office in the West, and in his day he was the most powerful and most brilliant of our partisan editors. But in latter years the Press has grown beyond such partisanship, and with its growth the influence of Mr. PRENTICE and men of his class has declined. The true journal is no longer a personal organ. Personal journalism has only a limited mission. When a man considers that because he is the editor of a powerful newspaper he must, of necessity, make it the echo of his anger, his hopes, his ambitions, and his disappointments—his influence is feeble and purposeless. An editor is to his paper what the Governor is to the Commonwealth. He is its minister, not its master, and must govern it with wisdom and prudent consideration for the rights of others, remembering that there are always higher and nobler aims than any individual whim or prejudice. We see in England, and the time has come when we are beginning to see in America, that there can be no powerful and respected journalism that is not impersonal, and that no editor can fully do his work unless he is independent untrammeled and above all party influences. The editor sees that his mission is infinitely superior to that of any other profession, and instead of being the Squire or Adjutant of political leaders like CLAY, it is his privilege to compel even from them respect and obedience.

Mr. PRENTICE was the last remaining partisan editor of the West. Mr. GREELEY is, perhaps, the only one of any prominence in the East; and experience has so tamed and chastened our Eastern colleague that he is more in sympathy with the progress of modern journalism. Men die—the Press lives, and the editor should so serve his Press that, whether his mere body lives or dies, his newspaper will remain after him, and continue to grow with increasing power. A well-established newspaper becomes an integral part of modern civilization. No influence seems to affect it; and when the editor drags it down to the level of his own personality, to share in his bodily griefs and joys and misfortunes, he makes a grievous error. The journalists are beginning to see. We have outlived the old times of clamor, and defamation, and brilliant personal invective. The death of Mr. PRENTICE marks a dividing line. He did his work well. We could have wished his work had belonged to the new dispensation, but it was something he had to do, and it is giving him the highest praise to say that he did it with enthusiasm and courage as a man who believed in it, and labored to the end. Since work well done is the beauty and fullness of life, and may this be said of all of us as we say it now of the brilliant, bitter, aggressive champion who has passed to his rest.

The New National Guard Law.

The new National Guard law proposed by Colonel MURPHY contains features which will provoke the liveliest discussion. For example, he proposes to transfer to the Governor the power to appoint brigade commanders, instead of leaving them to be chosen, as now, by the field officers of the regiments included in the respective brigades. It so happens that at this moment there are vacancies which make this quite a serious and exciting matter. Colonel MURPHY's bill is based, doubtless, on the idea that there is no reason for the discrimination between division and brigade commanders; and that whatever reasons exist for the appointment of the former by the Governor, apply to the appointment of the latter by the same authority.

Next we come to the armory question. Last Winter a resolute effort was made by leading regiments in this City to secure a new armory. Hitherto only regimental armories have been in use; but Colonel MURPHY's bill provides for the erection of brigade armories and a division headquarters in the City of New-York,—measures which would introduce a more thorough system in this respect than has ever been attempted. Nor is this all. His bill proposes to establish a down-town armory—that is to say, one south of Canal-street; and the value of such an establishment, in case of a sudden riot or similar emergency in this part of the island would be great. With the upward spread of population, our armories have been gradually removed northward, in order to bring them nearer to the homes of members. The arrangement is a convenient one; but meantime the lower part of the City is left comparatively unguarded.

Again, the new bill confines the recent reduction of the National Guard to fit proportions. One of our evening contemporaries speaks of the new code as "reducing the numerous and unwieldy National Guard to 20,000 men." We understand the fact to be, however, that the Legislature authorized this reduction last year. A year ago the uniformed militia consisted, in round numbers, of about 25,000 men; of these, we think three regiments were lately mustered out, while other disbandments are progressing. The new bill would probably make this disbandment prompt and compulsory. To this part of the bill we may give unqualified approval. The great vice of the militia systems of all the States is their size. Instead of representing efficiency, they only represent numbers. In place of a few compact brigades, they have scores of skeleton regiments. From the days of WASHINGTON to our own, the reason of the failure of militia systems has been a want of proper organization, induced mainly by an excess of nominal troops. Under the old compulsory system of militia duty, all sorts of devices were resorted to for avoiding service. Some States bore on their rolls hundreds of thousands of names, and the really good soldiers were not one in a thousand. The parades became laughing-stock; the musters were contemptible; and after many years of trial the whole system broke down, and the present, or volunteer, arrangement, was substituted. Naturally, this fell at first into the same mistake of supposing that numbers meant efficiency. But every reduction of numbers, on the other hand, produces compactness and mobility.

The National Guard of New-York has for many years stood, beyond all question, at the head of the State militias of the country, and has furnished them a pattern of citizen-soldiery. Yet it has only been by persistently cutting off mere useless branches that the whole has been kept vigorous. As it is, its 25,000 men have been divided into fifty regiments, seven battalions, four troops and eight batteries; and when we reflect on the numerical strength of the largest regiments, we shall appreciate the slender numbers of the smaller. New-York City is the main strength of the National Guard, and the First Division contains half the force, or about 10,000 men. With proper consolidations, the substitution of breech-loaders for the arms now in use, and the providing of a suitable parade ground for the First Division, the efficiency of the entire National Guard would be increased.

Modern Improvements in Japan.

Only the other day we called attention to some of the "modern improvements" which had found their way into Japan, and now we have by telegraph from San Francisco a fresh catalogue to add to the number. We are told, for example, of a railroad already contracted for from Yeddo to Kioto; of a new Japanese coinage, in dollars, and not unlike the Mexican as to size and quality, which will eventually drive the old coin out of circulation; of fresh coal mines opened on the inland seas by the Government mining engineer; of drainage works for Yokohama,—and so on. We do not know whether it is also a sign of the "march of civilization" that some of our American civic notions are introduced into Yokohama in the shape of "frequent murders, riots and assaults;" but the Mikado's Government have at least got far enough along in modern devices to rely on foreign loans, no less than three millions sterling having been advanced on the new public works. All this denotes an intellectual and social activity, which would be, probably, many times greater, were it not clear that the revolution is not ended, and that Japan must pass once more through internal convulsions, before she takes her proper place among modern nations. It is this consciousness which checks trade and prevents the full development of the country in its new direction.

When, however, we remember that for the two hundred years preceding 1854, Japan was entirely shut out from the world, no native leaving and no stranger entering it; that it is only sixteen or seventeen years since Commodore PERRY succeeded in procuring for American ships the right to get supplies and to trade at Hakodadi and Simoda; and that it is only a little more than ten years since Mr. HARRIS received Yeddo and made his famous treaties which opened to us Nagasaki, we shall only wonder at the enormous advance which the last decade has seen in this Empire. At the present rate, what may we not hope from Japan in 1880, and what in 1900? It is clear that the present anxiety in Japan to introduce the appliances of Western civilization must open to us there a great market for our wares and outlet for our industry. The population of Japan is estimated at from thirty to forty millions. They are ready to take from American and European workshops, by degrees, whatever we can successfully introduce. We all remember how ready a sale our Government found for the Stonewall, and how good a market private shipbuilders have found for their vessels. We are too apt to confound the Japanese and Chinese in common argument regarding their national traits. The enforced seclusion of the Japanese for two centuries has impressed us with the erroneous conviction that they are naturally as hostile to foreigners as their continental neighbors. On the contrary, they are inspired by accounts of Western civilization in a way the Chinese people, as a whole, never have been; they welcome the devices of foreign science and enlitvation with far greater enthusiasm; and that they will one day prove great customers and friends of America is almost beyond question. It is this fact which makes every item of news regarding their political and social progress to us of interest and importance.

How Wool and Woolens Thrive Under Our Taxation.

The Tribune, in a recent article on pig iron, alludes very cheerfully to the condition of the woolen interest under our present taxation. The allusion is creditable to its disposition rather than its intellect, but we fear that the large majority of those who have either been engaged in manufacturing or growing wool, will not concur in so airy and cheerful a view of the situation. The remarkable and mysterious system of taxation applied to our woolen interest, we believe, has but one exact parallel in the history of the modern world. CHARLES V., of Spain, began the process of ruining manufactures in that unhappy country, in 1519, by imposing a precisely equal duty to that paid now by all woolen goods entering this country—namely, fifty cents a pound. The results have been somewhat parallel also in both countries—only, perhaps, worse in the United States, as here we have not merely ruined the wool-manufacturer, but also the wool-grower. The peculiarity of the wools of this country, as is well known, is that they are mainly the merino clothing wools, forming garments of an ordinary character. In producing these no country can compete with us. But to manufacture the broadcloths, cassimeres, and doeskins of a superior quality, we are obliged to mix in finer and foreign wools from Germany, Australia, and other countries. The American fleeces can make the warp, but the filling in must be of these foreign wools. If the manufacturer has our fleeces alone to fall back upon, he is so limited in the style of his fabrics that he soon loses command of the market, and must produce one kind of goods which speedily glut the community. Prices then fall, not only for these common goods, but for the fleeces from which they are made.

The legislators of the last tariff, with their usual perverse ingenuity, set about taxing just those finer wools which could not be grown here. They thus cut away the foundation for a diversified woolen manufacture, and succeeded in prostrating both wool-manufacturer and wool grower. Had our legislators possessed the slightest knowledge of the rudiments of political economy, they would have known that a low duty on foreign wools always benefits the native wool-grower. It was so in Great Britain. When the duties on foreign wools were abolished, the wool-growers believed themselves ruined; but they soon found that the manufacture was so diversified and so much cheapened by this reduction of taxes, that the demand was greater for their own product, and their business better. It was so also in France. When the duty on wool was reduced from thirty-three to twenty-two per cent. the price of native wool increased, and has remained higher since. A recent report to the French Emperor makes the same explanation of these facts which is offered here. High duties make low wool, because the manufacturers cannot use foreign wools to mix with native. The 70,000,000 of pounds of foreign wools which Congress undertook to exclude from the country, were not abolished, but immediately entered into foreign manufactures, rendering them still cheaper and more able to compete with our own. The duties on cloths, shawls and woolen goods are fifty cents per pound and thirty-five per cent. ad valorem. The duty on raw or unwashed wools and hair is from ten to twelve cents per pound. The Tribune, with the airy cheerfulness with which it is wont to regard taxation, will reckon the few dollars that these taxes cost each individual, and will congratulate the country on "the future" of the woolen interest. The results, however, of these inconsiderable taxes as a matter of "protection," are anything but enlivening to great numbers of our citizens.

Wool has reached during the past two years almost the lowest price it ever before touched, falling to 35.21 cents (gold) for Ohio wools during 1868, while in the forty years before the war it averaged 42 4-5 cents per pound. Moreover, the Commissioner of Agriculture estimates that the number of sheep decreased during 1868 some four millions throughout the country; and but one State—Missouri—indicates anything like the former prosperity in this important agricultural interest. So much for the effect of high duties on the wool grower. Now, so it is with the wool-manufacturers! So far from these immense duties discouraging importations, the imported foreign woolen fabrics have increased over $5,000,000 in value during 1869, and reach the value of $36,000,000. The exports of manufactured woolens have fallen off sixty per cent. during the past fiscal year, and reach only the petty value of $160,000, while the British exports during the same period were valued at $[illegible],000,000. The woolen manufacture of this country, as is well known, has reached, under this fostering legislation, almost the bottom of the hill, and the trade is depressed to the last degree. Smuggling has increased to an immense extent, and many factories for finer wools have been transferred to Canada, there to manufacture the foreign wools and probably smuggle the goods into this country. Our commerce with such countries as Southern Africa and Australia, that produced these wools, has fallen off to an alarming degree, and fewer ships and men are employed in the exchange of products. These high duties were laid not for revenue, but for protection. What is "protected" by them? No interest except that of the lobbyists who carried them through Congress. It is true that temporarily the whole body of consumers benefit by the prostration of the woolen interest, in purchasing for lower prices. But the counterbalancing injury done to a vast agricultural and industrial interest more than counterbalances this. When will Congress reform these evils?

The Sorrows of Tammany.

There is fresh trouble in the ranks of the City Democracy. Some of the leaders have come to the conclusion that it is extremely desirable to take the advice we have more than once given them, and get rid of the reproach which the government of this City has long been to the whole party. It is not too much to say that the flagrant corruption and profligacy exhibited in New-York have made the Democratic Party a by-word all the world over. It has injured it almost irreparably in the eyes of the great body of the American people. Nothing can be more natural than for thoughtful persons to say, "We can judge what a Democratic rule would lead us to from the condition of New-York. The Democrats are the masters of that City, and see what they have made of it. There is no mystery with regard to the fruit which comes from that tree. We have only to look to New-York to see it in perfection." The City is, in fact, a standing warning to the nation against permitting itself to fall into the hands of the Democrats. The example makes a greater impression upon the public mind than all the argument or invective of political adversaries.

We cannot be surprised that Governor HOFFMAN, who is anxious to stand well in the eyes of the country, should now desire to purify the government of New-York. The Mayor shares this solicitude, and would personally, doubtless, be sincerely glad to find himself connected with a reputable instead of a disreputable administration. But this section of the Democrats have been undone by their allies, just as has happened in other historical precedents which will readily occur to the Mayor. They formerly invited an unscrupulous class to enter their ranks, and now that they would willingly dispense with further services from this source, they find themselves hopelessly saddled with the incubus. "We can do without you," they say to their allies, who simply reply, "Very likely—but we don't intend to go. We will wait and take our full share of any plunder which happens to be going about."

It is hard to deal with associates of this description. They resent the very attempt to shake them off as an injury. They believe that they have rendered good service in past times, and in that idea they were much encouraged by their leaders, until the pressing emergency had passed by. They asked themselves why they should do all the work and other people get all the profit. This led to a scramble for office, and in the midst of it the "respectable" Democrats found themselves pushed to the wall. Men who are scarcely fit to be out of jail were able to seize upon important City offices. The title of "Alderman" or "Deputy Sheriff" became too often synonymous with the worst terms of opprobrium. To call an honest man by either title is to take away his character. The guardians of the City make themselves common in the lowest places of resort, or act as ringleaders in disgusting orgies, where women are thrown out of boxes at theatres, and men drink themselves into a state of frenzy. We say again that men like Governor HOFFMAN, Mr. OAKEY HALL and PETER B. SWEENY have good cause to be ashamed of this scandalous rabble. We are almost tempted to sympathize with them in their present humiliations. Our correspondent at Albany told us the piteous tale yesterday. The "shoulder-hitters, ballot-box stuffers and repeaters" do not want to be "respectable." It is a luxury which they do not understand, and could never be brought to admire. Is it at all likely that our present Aldermen, Sheriffs, and the like, will voluntarily relinquish the prizes they have seized? They must undergo a strange transformation before they are capable of any single act which honorable citizens would be likely to approve. The tiger which has once tasted human blood, cannot afterwards be put on a milder diet. We are sorry for the Governor and his friends, but after all they alone are to blame for their present afflictions. They who sow the wind must reap the whirlwind. And might not a Deputy Sheriff turn round and tell the Governor to pluck the beam out of his own eye? Is it quite certain that Mr. HOFFMAN is no longer the slave of the Erie Ring—that ring which is more fatal to reputations than the folds of the anaconda are to animal life? Some of the Democratic leaders have been flinging away high principle with so prodigal a hand, that it is like a bad jest to hear them talking about honor now.

How often shall we have to repeat the terrible story of a panic in a crowded building? We all know it by heart. Some malicious or foolish person cries "Fire! fire!" and there is one general and fatal rush to the doors. In nine cases out of ten it is discovered when the alarm is over that no kind of danger existed. So it was in that shocking disaster at Liverpool on Sunday. Fifteen persons were trampled to death and many were injured in a wild attempt to escape from a church. If the people had only kept their seats all would have been well, for the cry of fire was a false one. By a coincidence, a similar attempt to create a panic was made in a Boston church on the same day. A malefactor has been arrested, and his confederates raised the alarm of fire in the hope of rescuing him. But for the attention of the police and decent persons, this plot would probably have ended in a great calamity. The truth is that people ought to be prepared for occurrences of this kind. In theatres or any other crowded buildings, the thing to be remembered is that it is safer to keep your seat than to attempt to "make a run for it." When a man in an audience cries out fire, be sure that he is a pickpocket or something worse; and, as the Quaker said to an angry crowd, "Do not put him under the pump," or otherwise make an example of him.

The irrepressible labor feud in Europe receives a fresh illustration in the latest dispatches from England. The announcement is still new of the reduction by military pressure of the miners of Le Creusot into a state of sullen subjection, when a similar rising is reported from the Thorncliffe Collieries, near Sheffield. It was but a fortnight ago that, in the same place, the unionist miners caused a serious destruction of property, and nearly provoked a fatal affray. A band, numbering five hundred, armed with bludgeons, marched to attack the house of a non-unionist workman. The friends of the latter armed themselves with revolvers, and it was only by the interposition of a hundred policemen that hostilities were averted. The passions generated on both sides by this collision appear to have smouldered only to break out into more serious consequences. The language of the telegram indicates a serious disturbance.

Can no scheme be devised to centralize the literary treasures scattered over this City into something deserving the name of a national collection? Of lending libraries we do not speak; it is desirable that they should be distributed so as to be easily accessible to all. But a great reference library, worthy of being compared with the magnificent collections of London, Paris and other European cities, is impossible under our present system. Did there exist a recognized nucleus round which collections devoted to the public use should be grouped, there would be some reasonable prospect of such a result. When shall we have a reading room like the British Museum, or the Parisian Salle de Lecture, it to contain a whole brigade of students, and associated with what ought to be the library of the New World?

A Jewish newspaper takes us to task for paying any attention to the "Reform" party within that ancient sect. It is difficult for any outside observer to estimate the true strength of such a movement, but we cannot be mistaken in supposing that a section of the Jews are anxious to make great and fundamental changes in their doctrines and faith. The inauguration of the "Temple Israel" in Brooklyn, is one of innumerable signs of this tendency. "Free-thinking" Jews, who have always allowed themselves the utmost latitude, stand entirely apart from an honest and religious attempt on the part of thoughtful men to "abandon the follies of Judaism." We must repeat our former remark, that we want facts in connection with this curious schism. They would be regarded with much interest by public writers of all shades of opinion, and could not in any way injure the Jews in the estimation of the community.

The Anglo-French commercial treaty is evidently in danger. The denunciatory speech made by M. THIERS on Saturday last may not, taken by itself, be more formidable than his memorable philippics inciting to war with Prussia. But though the Orleanist chief may have personally lost much of his importance, it must be borne in mind that the most powerful section of the new Ministry is composed of his friends and adherents. The famous Club of the Rue de Poitiers, of which he was the directing spirit, included MM. BUFFET, DARU, TALHOUET and SEGRIS, who hold the most important posts in the new Cabinet. Moreover, the English treaty was passed without the sanction of the Legislative Assembly; and, in spite of very decided proofs as to its beneficial operation, it may not improbably be sacrificed on account of the arbitrary exercise of personal power of which it was the result.

Who is the ingenious person that invents the startling stories which run like wildfire through the "street" at regular intervals? Two things in connection with them are truly wonderful—first, that anybody can be found so credulous as to believe them; second, that they become town-talk in less than a couple of hours after they are started. Rumor, with its hundred tongues, is a newspaper in itself. Yesterday afternoon the stock subject of the canard-mongers was pressed into service once more. The Emperor NAPOLEON was dead. The craving of most people for something new is one cause why these fabrications always find ready credence. Saturday night's story ought not, however, to have had the success which actually attended it. It was not very likely that Mr. FISK would make a way with Mr. MORRESSEY. Mr. MORRESSEY is said to keep all his engagements, and when was Mr. FISK known to break one of his, or to treat any living creature dishonorably? After the gold panic there were rumors of war between the friends, but righteousness and peace soon kissed each other. FISK and MORRESSEY fell into each other's arms. Cannot the Wall-street gossips let respectable private reputations alone?

The unanimity with which the Produce Exchange of this City received the report of the delegates to the Commercial Union Convention at Rochester is a hopeful sign as regards the State canals. The action which the Union took is thoroughly practical, and the establishment of an Executive Committee in every town along the canals insures a system of observation which will render the covering up of fraud and mismanagement for the future impossible. It is, indeed, a wonder that the produce merchants' the class of all others most interested in the proper working of the canals, have not moved earlier. It is better late than never; and the fact that no less than forty of these Committees are organized and in action, shows that the day of reforms cannot be far distant.

We hope that the North Adams Savings Bank will not listen for a moment to the proposal from the burglars who lately robbed its safes. These modest operators will give back, it seems, the $25,000 in notes and unrealizable securities which are of no use to them, provided they may keep the remaining bonds and greenbacks, and be allowed to go unmolested. The reason why they are driven to make this offer is that they are closely pursued, and in serious fear of arrest. Here, then, is a chance for one of an effective circle by the Police, who, having brought their men to bay, have but one more duty to perform. For the sake of public safety, let the bank refuse a compromise; and for the sake of their own credit, let the officers of the law decline to have a hand in it. This burglar-brokerage business is disgraceful to all who submit to and then encourage it, adding greatly to the risks to which places where money or valuables lie are subjected.

The news thus received is later by six days than was received by the Calabria. Captain DAURE, of the Pereire, has our thanks for late Paris papers.

The English papers print the convention just ratified between the Chinese and the English governments as an addition to the treaty of Tientsin.

On the evening of Jan. 10, Mr. CHARLES MATHEWS was complimented by a grand farewell dinner at WILLIS' ROOMS, in London. Lord HOUGHTON, General CAVENDISH, and many literary and theatrical celebrities were present.

According to the Patrie the present debt of the city of Paris is 1,047,000,000 of francs, which is to be paid off in sixty years. Considering that there are a number of streets left unfinished in the very heart of the city, that amount must be largely added to.

The ship Cassipore, of Liverpool, had foundered at Cape Cornwall. Nineteen of the crew were drowned, including Captain WHITE. The remaining nine of the crew left in a boat, and were picked up by the steamer Navarre.

A meeting of the Geographical Society was held Jan. 10 in the theatre of the Royal Society, Albemarle-street, London. Sir R. MURCHISON, Bart., in the chair. At this meeting Lord HOUGHTON, who had been chosen to represent the Society at the inauguration of the Suez Canal, reported the results of his observations. The noble Lord did not think the immediate effects of the Suez Canal would be of very great importance, and that it would mainly develop the trade of Greece and Italy, and small trade generally, but that the trade of France and England was too large to receive much benefit from it. As for the perfection of the work, Mr. HATEMAN, the eminent engineer, who represented the Royal Society at the opening of the Suez Canal, pronounced M. de LESSEPS' great work "a decided success"—"not only, as could be desired, was all that was promised, and very far from being finished, even on the contracted scale on which it has been executed,"—but still "a decided success." He has no doubt that the canal can be more easily kept in working order than the streets of London can be kept free, clean, and in proper repair; and, in regard to the financial aspect of the undertaking, he states that it has been estimated, "on what appears reasonable and moderate assumptions, that, after all expenses of maintenance are defrayed, the sum of £966,000 will remain for payment of interest."

M. GUSTAVE LAMBERT, the pioneer of the French expedition to the North Pole, has just issued a circular relative to the present state of his project, and which contains the following passage: "The ship Bordel," he says, "is now awaiting the moment for her departure in the Vauban Dock, at Havre. The date of sailing is at present fixed for Sunday, the 16th of March. We had asked for an average assistance to the amount of 5,000 francs from each Department. The Seine-Inférieure has furnished 25,000 francs. The amount we have received from each of the chief towns in France was: Paris, 40,000 francs; Lyons, 17,000 francs; Havre, 15,000 francs, and Rouen, 7,000 francs. All the other centres of population have contributed lesser sums. Proportionately, the smaller places have shown more liberality than the greater. The majority of the Chambers of Commerce have also accorded their valuable support." The writer adds that a further subscription of only 10 francs from each canton in France (there are 2,870 in all) would enable him to put to sea immediately.

The English papers announce the death of General Sir DE LACY EVANS, at his residence in Great Cumberland-street, at the advanced age of 87 years. He was the son of Mr. JOHN EVANS, of Milltown, in Ireland, and having been educated at Woolwich, obtained his first commission as Ensign, in Feb. 1787, and then proceeded to India, where he served for three years, and afterwards fought in Portugal, Spain and France. Between 1814 and 1837 he served in Belgium, America, and again in Spain, and from the commencement of his career, in the operations against HYDER KHAN, until its close, his military life is one long record of gallant deeds and illustrious services to his country. In later years he will be best remembered in connection with the command of the Second Division during the Crimean war, and on his return to this country he received the thanks of the Queen and of both Houses of Parliament, the Duke of NEWCASTLE, then Secretary of State for War, taking especial care to pay a high tribute to the gallantry displayed by General EVANS. In the year 1831 he contested the Sandwich Division of Hampshire in the Liberal interest, and in May, 1833, succeeded the late Lord BROUGHTON in the representation of Westminster, and sat for that distinguished constituency with a brief interval until 1835. General Sir DE LACY EVANS was married in 1834 to the widow of Mr. P. HUTCHINS, of the East India Company, and daughter of Colonel ARBUTHNOT, and whom he survived a few years.

TRAGEDY OF THE DAY.

The Shooting of Victor Noir by Pierre Bonaparte—Particulars of the Affray and its Consequent Incidents—The Interment of the Victim—Great Popular Demonstration.

When the Pereire sailed, Paris and France were a prey to the wildest excitement. The facts of the Auteuil tragedy were fresh in every mind. These facts have already been telegraphed to the Times, and it seems hardly necessary to review the two versions relative to the shooting of VICTOR NOIR, journalist, by Prince PIERRE BONAPARTE. Of the after events, however, some account must be given, and with it are to be included a few incidents connected with the event itself.

THE SHOOTING.

The Moniteur publishes the following letter written by the Prince immediately after the event: "MY DEAR M. CONTI: I hasten to inform you that a great misfortune has befallen me. Two journalists of the Marseillaise came to challenge me. One of them struck me; the other threatened me with a six-shot pistol. I fired, and I think I killed one of them. I place myself for some sergents-de-ville and the Commissary of Police." The following is a description of the room where the fatal occurrence took place: "About twenty steps are ascended and the visitor finds himself in the fencing gallery, a sort of anti-chamber to the saloon. This apartment, the walls of which are bare, has only one point worthy of note, namely, the chimney-piece at the end, where there is a rather curious collection of swords, daggers and firearms. There are specimens of them from every country, from the Yataghan of the Chinese to the espingole of Cantier, from the primitive arquebuse of the Huguenots to the American rifle. There are also the most recent models, and lastly, the ordinary bowling piece. The Prince is a great amateur of weapons, and a new one is rarely produced without his receiving a visit from the inventor. Thus it is almost impossible for a visitor to sit down or lean against a piece of furniture without displacing an arm of some sort."

SURRENDER OF THE PRINCE.

As soon as the Minister of Justice was made acquainted with the sad event he immediately sent a message to the Procureur-General to act without delay, and that functionary delegated M. DESREAUX, Procureur-Imperial, and M. BERNIER, Examining Magistrate, to proceed without delay to the preliminary investigations. Those gentlemen arrived at Auteuil at 4 in the evening. The Prince had left an hour previously and gone to the Conciergerie; M. BOIDOT, Commissary of Police, had questioned him. The legal functionaries, after having visited the spot where the occurrence took place and whence the body of M. VICTOR NOIR had been removed to the chemist's shop of M. MOUTREUX, returned to the prison to interrogate the accused. When the Prince await had gentleman's arrival, at 5 o'clock, he found no one there but a young registrar's clerk, who was amazingly astonished at his visitor's demand to be looked up. As no one can be confined without a warrant, the young man, in the absence of the director, M. GRODON, refused. The Prince then declared that he would await that gentleman's arrival, and when the latter entered the request was repeated. M. GRODON immediately sent off for BARNAULTS and BERNIER made their appearance. All difficulty was immediately removed. The Prince underwent a long examination. He is confined in the tower nearest to the gate, and which looks on the quay, and in which the Governor's Cabinet is situated. During the interrogatory the accused stated that he had sent to the Marseillaise for M. ULRIC DE FONVIELLE to go and make his deposition at the office of M. BUSNIER at the Palais de Justice. M. DE FONVIELLE was not arrested, as has been reported. Moreover, no pressure existed for such a step, his part in the affair being simply that of a witness. His examination lasted nearly three hours—from 11 at night till 2 in the morning. He is said to have admitted that he carried a sword stick and a pistol when he called on the Prince, but that M. VICTOR NOIR was unarmed. The prisoner still asserts that, after some conversation with M. DE FONVIELLE, he asked his interlocutors, in somewhat sharp language, whether they considered themselves as jointly responsible with MM. GROUSSET and ROCHEFORT, that M. VICTOR NOIR then smiled in the affirmative and struck the Prince in the face. Immediately the latter, who has long been accustomed to carry a small revolver, drew out the weapon and fired. The Prince added that, had he not been provoked by M. NOIR he should not have shot him, as M. DE FONVIELLE—a point the latter does not deny—was the person who had spoken during the interview. The fact is asserted that immediately after the scene which had taken place, Doctors FIRMIN and MONOD had found the traces of a blow on Prince PIERRE BONAPARTE'S left cheek, near the neck.

CRY FOR JUSTICE.

The following is a report of the proceedings in the Legislative Body after the homicide. M. ROCHEFORT said: "I wish to put a question to the Minister of Justice. A murder was committed yesterday on a young and engaged on a sacred mission, that of a second sent to make a communication. The criminal is a member of the Imperial family. I ask the Minister if he intends to oppose to the judgment and probable condemnation of that person the same denial of justice that was made to those citizens who were beaten with sticks by certain high dignitaries of the Empire. The situation is grave, and the agitation increasing. [Interruptions.] The murdered man is a child of the people. [Noise.]

THE PRESIDENT—It was decided yesterday that questions should be put summarily and without development. Yours has been stated in precise terms. The Minister has now to consider whether he will reply to-day. [Hear, hear.]

M. ROCHEFORT—I say that the victim is a child of the people. The population claims to judge the murderer themselves. They demand that the ordinary jury—[Interruption and noise].

THE PRESIDENT—We are all children of the people. All are equal before the law, and you have no right to make distinctions. [Hear, hear.]

M. ROCHEFORT—Then why appoint Judges devoted to the Imperial family?

THE PRESIDENT—You place Judges under suspicion without knowing who they are. I now invite you to confine yourself to the question, or I cannot allow you to continue.

M. ROCHEFORT—I ask myself, after an occurrence like that of yesterday, and in presence of the facts which have been taking place for some time past, whether we are living under BONAPARTE or BONIFACE. [Exclamations, cries of "Fresh applause." "I call on all citizens to arm and administer justice for themselves. [Renewed agitation.]

THE PRESIDENT—M. ROCHEFORT, I call you to order. [Hear, hear.] It is not permitted to take advantage of the immunity which covers members of this Chamber to use such language. [Fresh applause.] I call on all citizens to arm and administer justice for themselves. [Renewed agitation.]

M. ROCHEFORT—Yesterday at six in the evening that man had not been arrested. [The rest of the phrase was lost in the noise.]

THE PRESIDENT—I invite the Chamber to calm and silence. The question is most serious, and remarks must not be allowed to be uttered without the leave of the President. [Assent.]

M. EMILE OLLIVIER, Minister of Justice—Gentlemen, we are justice and law. I ask you also to be calm and moderate.

M. RASPAIL—But murder has been committed!

M. EMILE OLLIVIER—Allow me to explain. You will, I hope, reply to me afterwards, if you please. You interpellate the Government with outrages. We shall reply to you without insults. [Hear, hear.] A painful event.

M. EMILE OLLIVIER—If M. ROCHEFORT were better acquainted with the rules of justice, of which he puts himself forward as the sole representative, he would know that when a citizen is awaiting trial under accusation, no one has a right to anticipate the verdict of the Judges and condemn him. As soon as the Ministry of Justice was informed yesterday of the painful event in question, he ordered the arrest of Prince PIERRE BONAPARTE. The instructions were about to be executed when the Prince gave himself up as prisoner at the Conciergerie. That first measure having been adopted, there remained to consider what further measures should be taken to-day. The Prince PIERRE BONAPARTE, through the Procureur-Imperial, asked to be tried by an ordinary jury. I replied that the Minister of Justice was bound by the formal text of a Senatus Consultum, and that his duty was to apply the law, although he might sincerely consider whether the Legislation did not require to be modified. [Hear.] I have in consequence submitted to the Emperor, for his signature, a decree convoking the High Court of Justice. We will afterwards examine whether that exceptional jurisdiction should be abrogated, and we shall perhaps be of your opinion. But, Sir, I will not tolerate that you should accuse any Judge of being wanting in dignity and independence.

M. ROCHEFORT—I refer to my own condemnations.

M. EMILE OLLIVIER—You have only to refer to some of your colleagues who exercise their profession before the tribunals, and they will tell you that the French bench is deficient in neither of those qualities.

M. RASPAIL—It has no independence whatever!

M. EMILE OLLIVIER—Moreover, the jurisdiction before which we send Prince PIERRE BONAPARTE is not of recent creation; it is composed not only of Judges, but also of a jury chosen by lot among the Councillors-General of all the departments. You appeal at every moment to public opinion; therefore, why do you complain that the whole country, and not the City of Paris alone, should be the judge of Prince PIERRE BONAPARTE? After this explanation I have only to add that the Government has fulfilled its duty. [Yes, yes] with firmness, promptitude and decision. [Hear, hear.] It will continue in the same course. [Yes, no.] Not exaggerate the gravity of the situation. A murder has been committed by a high personage; we prosecute him, and thus prove that, faithful to Democratic principles, we subject both great and small to the justice of the country. [Loud applause.]

M. ROCHEFORT and RASPAIL—That is what we demand.

M. EMILE OLLIVIER—As for the provocations by which an attempt is made to excite popular passions, by speaking of a "man of the people killed," and by descriptions of a nature to excite the imagination, we look in them calmly and without fear. We are the law, right, moderation and liberty, and if you compel us we will use force also.

M. RASPAIL—You are applauding a melancholy act.

THE PRESIDENT—The Chamber has commended the Ministry which deserves to be supported.

M. RASPAIL—The murder has caused more sensation than that of HOFFMANN. [Interruption.] And the authority to which you defer is not justice.

THE PRESIDENT—You must confine yourself to the question.

M. RASPAIL—The tribunal before which the murderer of VICTOR NOIR will be tried will be composed of Judges named by yourselves. We know what those High Courts of Justice are. We have seen them at work. They are devoted to the men by whom they are appointed. Have we not daily examples?

THE PRESIDENT—I cannot permit doubts to be cast on the independence and sincerity of the judicial authority.

M. RASPAIL—We require a jury not composed of enemies of the people. I repeat, we know what is meant by High Courts of Justice. In one of them we once found a man who had been condemned to the galleys.

After a few additional remarks the incident terminated.

THE FUNERAL.

The interment of M. VICTOR NOIR, on Jan. 12, was taken advantage of by his political friends to make a manifestation. Although the hour fixed for the funeral was 8 in the afternoon, long before that time numerous groups of workmen were seen approaching through the streets towards the Champs Elysées, on their way to Neuilly, while rise of cabs followed each other, heavily laden with men in blouses, who had clubbed together for a conveyance from the Faubourg St. Antoine, Belleville, and other districts somewhat remote from the residence of the deceased. By 1:30 the Rue du Marché, Neuilly, and the adjoining streets were completely blocked up with the crowd, and when the hearse, one of the most simple character, arrived, it had great difficulty in approaching the house. M. ROCHEFORT arrived at about 1:30, and shortly afterwards M. LOUIS BLANC appeared at the threshold of the door, and made a sign that he was about to speak. A deep silence followed; "Citizens," he said, "it has just been decided, in concert with the editors of the Marseillaise and the Réforme, that there shall be a pacific manifestation this day; but be calm, citizens, be calm. Do not forget that there are around us hundreds of spies having revolvers in their pockets." The shops in Neuilly were generally closed, and from the large number of persons in the streets the neighborhood wore the aspect of a holiday. A feature worthy of remark was the entire absence of the Police and armed force, as with the exception of a strong body of the former at the fortifications, the thoroughfares were entirely abandoned to the people. Order was, however, perfectly maintained, and this withdrawal of the repressive elements from the scene of disturbance was, perhaps, but natural, as, had any collision taken place, the worse effects than some little damage to the trees, garden walls and railings on the line which the cortège was to take, and on which the spectators climbed, regardless of the objections of the proprietors, who in most instances did not attempt to interfere, would inevitably have ensued. At 2:30 the coffin was placed on the bier, and some friends of the family of the deceased endeavored to marshal the crowd into some sort of order; but the throng was so dense that to penetrate through it was found to be quite impracticable, and a circuitous route to reach the Avenue de Neuilly was chosen. The procession was opened by a few hundred young men walking in a broad line, arm in arm; these were followed by the hearse, before which walked the brother of the deceased, carrying some crowns of immortelles. The majority of the persons who joined in the procession also wore sprigs of the same flower, which were sold by numbers of hawkers. The body was followed by the friends of M. VICTOR NOIR, foremost among whom was M. ROCHEFORT, who was completely overcome by the number of workmen who crowded around him to shake hands; then came the funeral body of the publier walking like the others in front with arms joined. The procession proceeded in complete silence along the Rue Perronet, all heads being bare; but on reaching the Boulevard Inermann, where a large body of spectators were waiting, loud cries of Vive ROCHEFORT!" were raised and continued for some time. The Rue Louis Philippe was next followed, to the point of which it debouches in the Avenue de Neuilly, where the most numerous body of spectators were collected. Here the Deputy of the Seine received another ovation still more enthusiastic, and loud cries of "To Paris!" burst forth. An attempt was made to lead the car in that direction, but M. ROCHEFORT addressed those around him, pointing out that the Police would certainly close the gates to prevent them from entering, and that a collision at that moment would be altogether ill-timed. He thus persuaded them to continue on their way to the cemetery at Neuilly. The people themselves took the horses from the car and drew it along; three men also took M. LOUIS NOIR on their shoulders and carried him in triumph for a considerable distance, accompanied by shouts of "Vive ROCHEFORT!" and "Vive la République!" No further hindrance occurred, and at the appointed time the cortège reached the street which leads from the avenue to the cemetery. This thoroughfare being extremely narrow and already crowded, the relatives and intimate friends of the deceased alone accompanied the body to the grave, where, these being not religious services, the ceremony lasted but a short time. Addresses were pronounced over the grave by MM. ROCHEFORT, DELESCLUZE, DE FONVILLE, FLOURENS, and LOUIS NOIR. At this moment, the spectators and followers must have numbered at least 100,000 persons. They then in small groups in the roadway, and while awaiting the return of the funeral party formed into knots for discussion, in which the most revolutionary opinions were freely expressed. A little later, M. ROCHEFORT returned from the cemetery in a cab which then took the lead in a long, slow, and the people quietly set out on their return to Paris. Then occurred, perhaps, the most curious incidents of the day. A separation took place between the more idlers and the more dangerous portion of the assemblage, the former keeping to the sidewalks, continuing their part of spectators, while the latter formed a compact mass of about 40,000 men, and marched in close ranks, chanting the "Marseillaise," varied at intervals with cries expressive of their sympathy for ROCHEFORT and a Republic. On went the moving mass, many supposing that the gates at the fortifications would be closed and that the Police would make a stand to prevent the demonstration from entering Paris. But no impediment was made, and those defenders of order looked on, many smoking their pipes with the most perfect unconcern. Near the Place de l'Etoile is a wine shop kept by one BARNES; the cortège remarked the name, and passed forth a prolonged groan or cheer. The mob entered the Champs Elysées, causing quite a panic among the private carriages, the drivers of which, uncertain as to the intentions of the coming throng, darted off into the side streets. The crowd still advanced, and the question arose in many minds, "Where are we to end?" The cheers of the "Marseillaise" had not ceased, and the throng, apparently emboldened by encountering no opposition, shouted still more defiantly their seditious cries. The Rond-Point had just been reached, when suddenly there was a clattering of sabres behind, and a dense and dark cloud which had been almost concealed in the shadow of that building spread out like a fan across the Champs Elysées, and in a moment a triple line of sergents de ville, supported by a squadron of hussars, barred the way; then, just opened to allow the carriage of M. ROCHEFORT to pass through, the cortège separation from his followers. An officer then advanced, and after he had summoned the people to disperse, three short rolls of the drum giving the legal warning were heard. The crowd appeared for an instant to hesitate, but at that moment the clouds, which had been gathering in the horizon, burst all at once, and a sharp shower of rain came down, driven hard by strong gusts of wind. This was sufficient to decide the waverers, and they instantly disbanded into a disorderly rabble which forsook the road for the shelter of the trees in the side avenues, or thronged forward in the direction of the Place de la Concorde. At the corner of the Rue de Rivoli the mob met a small body of National Guards, whom they cheered heartily, waving their caps in the air as they passed. Before the Tuileries shouts of "Ça-ira-ira" were raised to the air of the "Lanternes," after which the workmen wended their way to their respective districts, evidently well pleased with their manifestation, to judge from the remark of one of them: "Il n'y a rien eu de si beau depuis l'enterrement du Général Lamarque."

PIUS IX.

New Year's Address to the Troops—Papal Relations with Victor Emmanuel.

On New Year's Day the Pope received General KANZLER and the officers of the Pontifical Army. The Unità Cattolica now publishes the text of the reply of His Holiness to the congratulations offered to him on that occasion. This speech had already been given in some of the Italian papers, but was not regarded as authentic. Its appearance in the Unità Cattolica is considered to remove all doubt on the subject: "I accept with pleasure," he said, "the congratulations of my small army, and it is with pleasure that I recognize your zeal in serving this noble cause, for which such noble and numerous sums have been offered from all parts of the world. It is sometimes said that our Lord and St. Peter were not kings, that they had no army, and our right to have soldiers is denied. With regard to Jesus Christ, when he was in the Garden of Olives, the Garibaldians of that period came in a crowd to him asking for Jesus of Nazareth, and he replied, "I am He," and all fell to the ground. He thus wished to show that he had the Divine power; but he told the Apostles who came to his aid to stop, because if his Father in Heaven wished it he would send to him his legion of angels. But it was necessary that his words should be fulfilled. It is undoubted that Jesus Christ declared before the Jews that he was a King; that they themselves took care to write this in three languages on the cross. With regard to St. Peter, the successor of Jesus Christ, he was a fisherman, and had no army; but he had the power of wrenching an avenging sword from Ananias and Sephiras with a word. And as I have only the title of King without the power of working miracles, I need an army, a small army, to defend this throne, small in itself, but immense by the influence and truth that emanate from it. I am proud, therefore, of having to defend it, and of bearing the flag that the revolution would take from you. I will tell you something. A certain personage has implored a great pardon, excusing his fault by saying he had obeyed the violence of his Government, which wished to place the Pontiff in the hands which have assailed and despoiled us. We had long known this, but we were pleased to receive the irrefragable proof of it from this personage himself. Be proud, therefore, I repeat it, to serve the Pontifical cause, and may God preserve your courage, not for war, which I hope there will be none, but for the daily struggle against the snares to which you will not fail to be exposed anew. May God preserve you this courage as well as your constancy and fidelity in your noble mission, a mission in which I see these valorous Romans taking part. I implore the Divine blessing upon you, upon your families, and upon all who cooperate in any way in the defence of the Pontifical throne." The personage referred to by the Pope is assumed to be VICTOR EMMANUEL; and a Florence correspondent declares that there seems to be a great determination to repudiate the idea that the Sovereign spared into some engagements respecting the temporal power.

GEORGE PEABODY.

The Possession of his Estates at Stockwell—Investigations into the Deceased Philanthropist's Title.

From the London Daily News, Jan. 11.

An inquiry was held yesterday in the Sessions House, Newington, before G. E. MAULE, Esq., and T. D. ARCHBALD, Esq., (two Commissioners specially appointed,) and a special jury, respecting certain lands and premises at Stockwell, which had been purchased on behalf of the late GEORGE PEABODY, Esq., and were now sought to be transferred to the Crown (Mr. PEABODY being an alien and not being entitled to hold real estate) prior to being handed over to the trustees of the Peabody Fund. The order from the Crown calling the court, and the various deeds and documents having been recited, Mr. Commissioner MAULE said they had been called upon to try whether Mr. PEABODY was an alien, and whether the deed purported to be a fact. The reason for this inquiry was that by the law of England persons not subjects, here aliens, are unable to hold land in this country, through any legal or equitable title. This inquiry was to find what land Mr. PEABODY died possessed of in this country, because although he may have been in fact possessed, by law he had no title. It appeared that Mr. GEORGE PEABODY, having made various offers of the City of London, made a third endowment of £500,000. Past of this he proposed to convert into land, and proceeded to, and did in that, purchase between thirteen and fourteen acres of land at Stockwell, of the London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company, Sir CUTHBERT M. LAMPSON acted for Mr. PEABODY, as Mr. PEABODY could not hold land, purchasing it with money supplied by Mr. PEABODY; but that did not give any legal or equitable title, and it was now to be settled whether this land should be vested in the Crown, and the Crown, having a legal title, would hand it over to the trustees. The various deeds of transfer and indentures were here produced, showing that in consideration of the sum of £15,625 the Company made over to Sir C. M. LAMPSON thirteen acres one rod fourteen perches of land, with certain premises and hereditaments, lying southward of the London, Chatham and Dover Railway, at Stockwell, and these rods nine perches of land adjoining the before-mentioned land. The deed of endowment of the last £500,000, wherein mention is made of the lands at Stockwell, was produced, and the signature of GEORGE PEABODY, attested by Sir C. M. LAMPSON. Mr. BROOK, Secretary to the Railway Company, proved the seal of the Company, and Sir C. M. LAMPSON produced the entry in his ledger, wherein Mr. PEABODY was credited with the lands and premises now under inquiry. Sir C. M. LAMPSON said he lived in Eaton-square, and in his house Mr. PEABODY died. Mr. PEABODY was born at Danvers, Mass., first came to England in 1829, and established himself in business in the City. He was never naturalized in England, and refused all English titles and honors, choosing to remain a citizen of the United States till his death. An arrangement was made between himself (Sir C. Lampson) and Mr. PEABODY as to the purchase of land at Stockwell. The land was to be bought and owned by himself, but to be reserved for Mr. PEABODY'S use. That arrangement had been carried out by the deed already read. After that there was to be a conversion of the land to trustees, and the land was embraced in the second endowment. Witnesses after witnesses were convened, the land to the trustees. Mr. PEABODY requested. Mr. ROBERT VIGNES proved that the property was of the yearly value of £338, and that since the conveyance the trustees had received the sum of £249, the produce of the rent. At this stage of the proceedings, and after Sir C. Lampson had another witness called, he left the Court, it was discovered that one of the jurymen had been sworn under a wrong Christian name, and for a time it seemed doubtful whether this would not invalidate the whole of the inquiry up to the point, but after consultation between the Commissioners it was decided to proceed, and to append to the documents the initial only of the offending name. The jury found that Mr. GEORGE PEABODY was an alien, born in parts beyond the seas, and not naturalized; that in virtue of an indenture made between the London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company, and the Peabody Fund Company, in consideration of the sum of £15,625 paid to them, did grant and convey certain pieces of land and premises lying on the south side of the railway at Stockwell; that the said lands were conveyed to Sir C. M. LAMPSON, were purchased by GEORGE PEABODY out of his own money, and conveyed in trust for him; that the lands, hereditaments, &c., conveyed are of the yearly value of £338, and that the land and premises now do belong to the Crown, by virtue of the royal prerogative, all which lands had been passed into the hands of Her Majesty. The finding of the jury then involved the signature of the Commissioners and the jury, and a copy signed by the two Commissioners was given over to the foreman of the jury, Mr. JESSE WOOD, for safe keeping and production in the event of dispute.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatrical.

"LA GRANDE DUCHESSE."

OFFENBACH'S choicest complication of fun, effrontery, melody and—something else, was revived last night at the French Theatre, under the management of Messrs. BYRNE & STARR. The experiment looked on its face somewhat doubtful. So well has the opera been done here before, and such favorites have been the representatives of the principal rôles that the attempt really looked like inviting failure. Strange to say, the performance of last night was a decided success—so decided as almost in its way, to constitute a triumph. Mrs. HOWARD PAUL, who played her erotic Highness of Gerolstein—for the first time in French, we are told, although her personation of the character in English has attained celebrity—will become a great favorite. She has what always pleases a New-York audience, an abundance of joyousness, of healthful animal spirits. Her laugh is natural, ringing and contagious; her voice a rich contralto, unequal in parts of the scale, but capable of unequivocal displays of power, well trained and showing considerable executive facility; and her action is that of a thoroughly schooled actress. Mrs. PAUL was on good terms with the audience directly they saw her, and this statement would quite inadequately describe her position in their good graces when the curtain fell at the closer. Her singing of the more celebrated morceaux was greeted by hearty applause, and the demand for their repetition seemed universal as well as genuine. On the whole, Mrs. PAUL'S Grande Duchesse will compare favorably with those of the best representatives of the character that have been seen in the United States. It is certainly full of the elements of popularity, and if slight exception be here and there taken to her accent, this must be admitted to be the solitary preventive of a general recognition of her superiority. Such exception is, however, not likely to be urged by the majority of the lady's audiences, and she has therefore good reason to congratulate herself on almost unqualified prospects of future success. M. GERBERUCK, the Fritz of this occasion, lacks the unction and cumulative energy of a former popular actor at the same house, but on the other hand he usually sings and always looks Fritz better than the artist in question, and it is satisfactory to have something like a raison d'être for the grand vocal passion which is otherwise now and again in danger of becoming disgusting. M. FRANCIS, the Prince Paul, we may remark in the same way, is not quite so elegant as that finished actor his predecessor, but he is a great deal funnier. The General Boum of M. DUCHESNE—who was received, we may mention, with long continued plaudits—is so well known as to call for no description other than it is one of the best bits of burlesque acting our stage has seen. He exaggerated at times rather more than formerly or than is necessary, but a laudable desire to assure the success of the opera was doubtless his admissible excuse. It is only requisite to add that the chorus was carefully drilled and the orchestra sufficient, and that both did great credit to the ability and industry of Mr. ROBERT STOEPEL, the conductor, to show that all the needful material for an auspicious result had been anxiously considered by the management, and no stone left unturned by them to secure it. We do not affect to approve dramatic works like the "Grande Duchesse." Our conviction is strong that neither their immediate tendencies nor their prospective influence are favorable to public morals or the best interests of the stage. None the less are we bound to acknowledge artistic success when we see it, and in conformity with this duty our opinions of last night's performance at the French Theatre have been thus frankly recorded.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The programme at this establishment was entirely changed last evening, when "Jocrisse, the Juggler," and "Cool as a Cucumber" were produced, with Mr. and Mrs. BONIFACE in the principal parts. As Jocrisse, Mr. BONIFACE played with considerable humor through the first act, and with much feeling in the scene where he discovers that Julie is really his daughter. Mr. DAVENPORT, Jr., was very comical as Tobie. In the afterpiece, Mr. BONIFACE as Pitmaper elicited as much laughter and applause as he could possibly have desired. The same programme will be repeated to-night and Wednesday, and afterwards the house will be closed until Monday night, when "The Twelve Temptations," on the preparation of which so much time and money have been expended, will be produced, with gorgeous scenery and appointments.

NEW-YORK CIRCUS.

A complete change of entertainment was offered the audience of the New-York Circus last evening. The programme was a notable one, even for this popular place of resort. No less than fourteen acts were presented, several being given for the first time. A protean equestrian scene was contributed by Señor FERDINAND GARRIZO, and elicited the heartiest laughter. Some feats with cannon balls, calling for immense strength and dexterity, were executed by Mr. HERCULES LEROY. An equestrian diversion of a very picturesque kind called "Blindman's Buff," was indulged in by Misses HINDLEY, HOLLOWAY, EDGAR and ROGERS and Mr. NAT. AUSTIN. A fresh series of acrobatic exercises was taken by the four DERRIK brothers. Besides, Miss HINDLEY performed on a tight rope, and gave occasion once or twice to an affrayment on the part of the ladies to separate the disputants. MCBURNEY finally drew a knife and attempted to stab his opponent, cutting him from stomach to shoulder, but there is little or no alarm about his celebration that culminates in the anniversary of to-day, and will elevate the commemorative feasts above the mere routine of public dinners.

In to-day's issue of the Engineering and Mining Journal is a letter from Professor GARB, containing a very emphatic disclaimer as to his responsibility for the highly-furnished reports lately circulated regarding the mineral resources of San Domingo. After distinctly repudiating all statements that have hitherto appeared, the Professor proceeds to give an unembellished narrative of what this much-abused and much-belauded island really does produce. It is satisfactory to find that yellow fever is not an extensively prevalent disease, as alleged, and that, although there are absolutely no roads, gold is abundant in regions which are easily accessible.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS

AT 95

FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX,

ISSUED BY THE

Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Minnesota Railroad Company,

FIRST MORTGAGE AND CONVERTIBLE,

AND PROTECTED BY A

LIBERAL SINKING FUND.

INTEREST PAYABLE IN COIN AT NEW-YORK OR LONDON. PRINCIPAL PAYABLE IN COIN IN FIFTY YEARS.

TRUSTEES:

J. EDGAR THOMSON, President Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

CHAS. L. FROST, President Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railroad Company.

These bonds, at present price of gold, yield over nine per cent. interest, and as an investment they are fully as secure as United States five-twenties, which now pay only six, and exempt from fifty per cent. in currency. There is only issued upon each section of the road, as fast as the same is completed and in successful operation. Over $2,500,000 have been expended on the road. Eighty-three miles are about completed and equipped, and already show large earnings; and the remainder of the line is rapidly progressing towards completion.

The State of Iowa, through which this road runs, is one of the richest agricultural sections in America. Its large population, extending with surprising rapidity, and its immense yield of grain, pork, wool and other agricultural products, create a pressing demand for the construction of this road, which affords the most direct route for the bondholder, especially by the time route through the wealthiest and most thickly settled portions of Iowa.

This road also runs through the rich and growing State of Minnesota. Reference to the map of the United States will show that it traverses the fine, enterprising and progressive portion of the West, and forms one of the great trunk lines in direct connection with New-York, Chicago and St. Louis, being to the latter city 6 miles nearer than North Missouri and all other roads. The State of Minnesota are Iowa and all portions of the West are now building new roads or projecting and completing the shortest route from Central and Southern Iowa.

The road is opened for local traffic as rapidly as constructed, and that RECEIVES EARNINGS ON ITS COMPLETED SECTIONS GREATLY IN EXCESS OF THE AMOUNT NEEDED TO PAY THE INTEREST ON THE BONDS BEFORE THE ROAD IS FINISHED. The buyer of these bonds is therefore guaranteed, by a great business already in existence on the route of the road, as well as by new contract lines which always attend the opening of roads in a new and unsettled country.

A limited quantity only of these Bonds are now offered at 95 and accrued interest.

After a thorough investigation of the above enterprise, we recommend these Bonds as a first-class investment, combining absolute safety, and paying an unusually liberal rate of interest. All marketable securities at their full price, free of commission and express charges, received in payment. Pamphlets and maps furnished on application.

FINANCIAL.

THE

OF THE

Chicago, Danville and Vincennes RAILROAD.

Total amount to be issued ... $2,500,000
Capital Stock paid in ... 2,100,000
Estimated Cost of Road (240 miles) ... 4,500,000
Net Earnings per annum ... 2,020,000
Interest on the Loan per annum ... 875,000
Amount of Bonds per mile of Road ... 10,000
Amount of Interest per mile ... 1,300
Amount of Net Earnings per mile ... 8,904

The Bonds follow the completion of the Road—have the Union Trust Company of New-York as their Official Register and Transfer Agent—and are sold at present at 95 and accrued interest.

They bear examination and comparison better, it is believed, than any other new issue before the public, in the fixed and unchangeable elements of Safety, Security, and Profit.

They bear good interest—Seven per cent. Gold for forty years—and are secured by a Sinking Fund, and First Mortgage upon the road, its outfit, and net income, the Franchises, and all present and future acquired property of the Company.

They depend upon no new or half-settled territory for business to pay their interest, but upon an old, well-settled, and productive country; assuming that a railroad built through the heart of such a region offers better security for both Interest and Principal than a road to be built through the most highly-settled wilderness or sparsely-settled territory.

This Railroad possesses special advantages, in running into and out of the City of Chicago, an important Railroad and Commercial Centre; in running through a line of villages and old farming settlements in the richest portion of the State of Illinois; in running near to deposits of Iron Ore of great extent and value, and over broad fields of the best coal in the State—which mining interests are its monopoly. And besides the local and other business thus secured, there will be attracted to this road the considerable traffic already spinning up "From the Lakes to the Gulf," as with its Southern Connections it forms a Trunk Line 45 miles shorter than any other route from Chicago to Nashville.

These Bonds are therefore based upon a Reality and a Business that a few years must inevitably double—and competent judges say treble—in value.

Governments selling while the price is high, pay well of you take these Bonds, and Trust or Estate Funds can be put into NOTHING BETTER.

Pamphlets, with Maps, &c., on hand for distribution. Bonds may be had directly of us, or of our advertised Agents.

During Prince ARTHUR's short visit to this City, several ladies of leading position endeavored to prevail upon him to take part in various social festivities. It was proposed to give a ball at the Academy of Music specially in his honor, but the offer was at once declined. A well-known gentleman then good-naturedly suggested a grand ball to which the Prince was to be invited, and the profits handed over to the Dramatic Fund. This also was found impracticable. We believe, however, that a half promise was made that the Prince would attend the Charity Ball early next month, and with this the ladies were compelled to be satisfied.

BROOKLYN.

The premises now occupied by the Cunard steamers at Jersey City are soon to be taken possession of by the authorities, and the streets cut through to the water front. The increased business of the line has long required more extensive accommodations, but until lately it was not decided where the agents could procure a water front adapted to their wants. Within a few days they have surveyed the property now occupied by the shipyard of E. F. WILLIAMS, at Greenpoint, and that adjoining known as the Cunningham property. The location is one that will give an extended front with deep water, and the channel will permit of piers long run out into the East River at least 400 feet, and out of the strong tideway, so that the steamers can leave the Company's dock at any time of the tide.

The Central Presbyterian Church in Schermerhorn-street, of which Rev. T. DE WITT TALMAGE is pastor, is to be offered for sale. They have received to have it free, with the understanding, however, that when a man has selected a pew he shall have undisturbed possession of it, as much as if he had paid $1,000 for it. The pew-holders in the present building are to be accorded the liberty of taking pews corresponding with those they now occupy. After making this announcement on Sunday, Mr. TALMAGE added: "To the carrying out of this Gospel idea I devote the remaining years of my life—so help me God."

THE REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE.

Details of the Reorganization Completed—Looking After the Offices.

A regular meeting of the Union Republican General Committee for 1870 was held at headquarters, Broadway, and Twenty-second-street, last evening, General JOHN COCHRANE, President, in the Chair. The Committee on Constitution and By-Laws reported a constitution and by-laws similar to those which governed the General Committee last year, which were adopted, with a few amendments, one of which declares a quorum to consist of thirty members. Another prohibits smoking in the room during the meetings of the Committee, and this makes it obligatory on the Treasurer to report to the organization the condition of its finances at the regular meeting in December. The regular meetings of the Committee are to be held on the evening of the first Thursday in each month. When the section designating the apportionment of delegates among the Assembly Districts was read, allowing one delegate to every 300 votes, and an additional one for a fractional part of 300, provided such fraction be more than 150 votes, considerable discussion was evoked. Several members contended that the apportionment was an unfair one. On motion of Mr. CONOVER, the section, which is the same as that under which the General Committee is now constituted, was referred back to the Committee to report at the next meeting.

Colonel A. J. E. DUQUESNE offered an additional section, providing for the appointment of a standing committee of seven, to take cognizance of the affairs of the Assembly District Associations and to report thereon to the General Committee, and providing, also, that the District Associations shall hold meetings at least once a month. Considerable discussion was evoked by the presentation of this section, Mr. CHAS. H. SPENCER and NATHAN KINGSLEY, Jr., among others, opposing its adoption and denouncing the proposition as an attempt to establish an inquisitorial espionage over the District Associations. The previous question was finally called, and the vote being taken, the proposed section was voted down.

Colonel DUQUESNE offered a proposition that a party code be provided for the government of Republican primary meetings and primary elections. Mr. SPENCER opposed the adoption of the proposition; and, in the course of his remarks, alluded to the proposed Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. When that should be adopted, he said, (and the assent of but one State more was necessary to make it valid and they were sure of three,) he believed that, under it, Congress would have power to venue a commission which might appoint the very inspectors, canvassers and poll clerks in every town and city in the United States. [Applause.] The Committee refused to assent to Colonel DUQUESNE's proposition, but voted to print it for the use of the delegates, and to consider it at a future meeting.

Mr. LEGGETT, of the First District, offered the following, which was referred to the Executive Committee with power:

Resolved, That on the appointment of the Executive Committee, said Committee be and are hereby instructed to procure a full and correct list of the employees now holding positions in the Post Offices, the Navy Yard, the Custom-House, the Marshal's and Surveyor's office; also, those in the Post Office, the New York Post, the offices of the Collector and Assessors of Internal Revenue, with the amount of salary that an appropriation not exceeding $500 be and is hereby made to carry out the object in view.

The meeting then adjourned.

LYCEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY

Germany to Supply the World with Salt and Potash—Professor Hitchcock's Observatory at an Altitude of Five Thousand Feet.

A regular meeting of the Lyceum of Natural History was held last night at the Mott Memorial Library, Madison-avenue, Professor NEWBERRY in the chair. After some regular business, Professor JAY gave a most interesting account of some salt beds at Stassfurth, Germany. These mines were first bored for in 1839, and in 1861 1,000 feet had been excavated. An analysis of the brine made at this time disheartened the persons engaged in the enterprise, but Professor MARCHAND, who was applied to, was of opinion that a layer of salt and other minerals had been passed through before striking the brine, and the Government was advised to sink shafts. This was done, and the results have been most satisfactory. The depth of salt is one foot, while very valuable minerals, such as carnallite, sabydrite, &c., exist in great quantities. Carnallite, fused with fluorspar and sodium, produces magnesium at a low cost, and the potash trade of Europe, and indeed of the whole world, may now be said to be monopolized by these mines, as this commercial and useful salt can be shipped to New-York and sold there at a less cost than potash of domestic manufacture. The Professor said that the salt mines extend over the whole district, and appear inexhaustible.

The Chairman then exhibited some fossils from tertiary deposits at Castle Creek, Idaho, and made remarks tending to show that the district was once covered by lakes as vast as those of the present day. Professor HITCHCOCK followed in an interesting description of an observatory he had established 4,000 feet above the level of the sea, at Moosilauke, one of the peaks of the White Mountains. The Professor, who is the State Geologist of New-Hampshire, went on to say that a conviction is now established there with a complete set of scientific instruments, and that remarkable phenomena have been observed. The wind at this point is terrific, and an account was given of a storm which occurred there a few days back in which the wind had attained a velocity of ninety-five miles an hour. The atmospheric phenomena observed at this elevation are beautiful. A photographer is attached to the staff of the observatory, and views of scientific interest have been obtained and will shortly be published. In conclusion, the speaker adverted to the advantages accruing from an observatory at such an altitude and expressed a hope that it would be allowed to be perpetuated. After some remarks on the formation of the Delta of the Mississippi by Professor EDWARDS, the meeting adjourned.

Disastrous Fire in Worth-Street—A Family Suffocated and One Killed.

At about 8 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in the second floor front room of No. 9 Worth-street, occupied by DAVID HARRIS, a shoemaker. The building is a two-story and attic frame, and contained eight families. The smoke rapidly filled the entire building, but all the inmates succeeded in gaining the street unharmed except a family named CASEY, occupying the attic. These unfortunates were the father, JAMES, aged 40, and the mother, JOANNA, aged 38, and two sons, JOHN J. and JAMES, aged 15 and 6, respectively. They had all gone to bed, and at the same moment that they were aroused by the cry of fire were met by the blinding smoke. The father, followed by the oldest boy, forced his way to the street, but the latter was severely burned during the perilous passage. The mother and younger boy JAMES remained in the room, the woman breaking out the window to obtain fresh air. The smoke, however, so densely filled the room that when the firemen gained it in a few moments and bore them to the street both were insensible. The sufferers were taken to the Fifth Ward Station House, where the boy JAMES died in a short time, but the mother was found to be so nearly dead that she was not even sent on passing in Bellevue Hospital.

The damage to property by the fire was inconsiderable. No alarm from the Department is recognized, but not being seen upon the ground, and nothing has yet been learned of the origin. All the facts, however, will be brought to light at the inquest, which will be held to-day at the Fifth Precinct Station House in Leonard-street, where the body of the victim remains.

Custom House Carriage—Meeting of Disappointed Carmen.

The carmen to the number of one hundred, met last night at the Bowery Bulldiam, to protest against the projected system of carriage in the Custom House. Mr. A. G. REYNOLDS presided. A report supplementary to that published yesterday was read, animadverting upon the daily papers for neglecting to publish the proceedings of their last meeting, and their protest with the signatures of merchants, except as an advertisement. The report recommended an appeal to the authorities in Washington against Collector GRINNELL's action in this matter. A resolution was adopted to demand from Mr. LINDSAY, at the Custom House, a specified copy of their protest, which is to be forwarded to Senator FESTON, at Washington. The speakers denied indignantly that the change was made for the benefit of the Republican Party, as there are Republicans as well as Democrats among the carmen thrown out by the proposed change. A Finance Committee was appointed and some subscriptions received on the spot.

The Paterson Railroad Difficulty—An Injunction Granted.

The suit of PETER WEILER against the Paterson and Newark Railroad Company for compensation for land taken by the Company, came up for hearing before Chancellor ZABRISKIE, in Jersey City, yesterday. WEILER claimed that the price of his land, $4,000, should have been paid within ten days after the award of the Commissioners, and upon the failure of the Company or the lessees of the road, the Erie Railway Company, he applied for an injunction to restrain them from running their trains over the property. The case was before the Chancellor on Monday last week, and was postponed until yesterday, when, the arguments being submitted, an injunction was granted. By an arrangement between the counsel it was understood that the papers were not to be served until the expiration of five days, in which time it is expected that the Company will settle up.

Messrs. Bernard Casserly, Bryan Lawrence, Joseph J. O'Donohue, James B. Nicholson and Robert McGinnis were also present. The success of the ball was partially due to the Committee of Arrangements, among whom were Congressman FOX, Senator CREAMER, JOHN DUANE, Councilman HATES and Coroner FLYNN. The following are the officers of the Association: JEREMIAH QUINN, President; Peter Cooper, First Vice-President; Charles O'Connor, Second Vice-President; Wm. J. 105 MILES COMPLETED.
ONLY 12 MILES
TO FINISH THE WHOLE LINE.
SEVEN PER CENT GOLD,
First Mortgage Bonds,
OF THE
Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company of Illinois.

THIS road is now VIRTUALLY COMPLETED, as there remained, at latest advices, but twelve miles of track to be laid, and the line will be opened throughout about Feb. 1, as the rails for its completion are now on the ground. Trains are running on the portion completed, and the earnings considerably exceed the anticipations of the Company. Seven-eighths of the bonds have already been taken by investors, and the present active demand will soon absorb the balance.

The road is 117 5-100 miles in length, and is the only East and West line connecting the cities from which it derives its name. No road has ever been built having more numerous valuable connections East and West. At Pekin it connects with Peoria, Burlington and Omaha; at Danville with the Toledo, Wabash and Western; at Indianapolis with the Pennsylvania Central, Baltimore and Ohio, and all the main lines East making a NEW THROUGH DIRECT ROUTE in Illinois and Indiana from New-York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, to Peoria, Burlington, Quincy, Omaha and the Far West. Among the advantages, therefore, claimed for the road is its POSITION, directly on the line of interoceanic travel, and in the track of the great movements of commerce from West to East.

THE LOCAL TRAFFIC must also be very large, as the road passes through one of the richest and most populous sections of Illinois, a State which has become famous for building up several of the most prosperous railroads in this country, through the immense local traffic contributed to them.

SECURITY OF THE BONDS.

The whole amount of bonds which can be sold is less than $18,000 per mile, on a road which has cost about $40,000 per mile; so that the total liability of the Company for interest once year will be only $140,000 in gold, a sum which is really insignificant when the character and location of the road is considered. In addition to the security furnished by a first mortgage upon the entire property of a first-class railroad 117 miles in length, the bonds have lately been further secured by a consolidation of this line with the Indianapolis, Crawfordville and Danville Road, making over two hundred miles under one management, so that the bonds are not only a First Mortgage of less than $18,000 per mile on this 117 5-100 miles, but have been assumed by the Consolidated Company under the name of the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railroad Company.

VALUE AS AN INVESTMENT.

The Bonds pay SEVEN PER CENT. IN GOLD, coupons being paid semi-annually, April 1 and Oct. 1, at the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in New-York. The Bonds may also be registered at the holder's option.

THEY ARE FREE OF INCOME TAX.

THEY ARE CONVERTIBLE into stock, and as the stocks of several of the principal lines of Illinois, such as the Rock Island, Illinois Central, Chicago and Alton, Burl
